LOOKING BACK

Very few men in our midst have made such a close study of the present war as the Rev. H. R. Grant, and on Sunday evening he made an observation which is worthy of comment. He used it to make a point in his able discourse to the Oddfellows, but it is of great historic importance. It was to the effect that had the Germans taken the straightforward course and attacked France directly through Verdun, instead of taking the roundabout way through Belgium, there would have been a vastly different story to tell.

A glance at a map shows that the shortest way to Paris was via Verdun. In order to evade tackling this fortress, the Germans criminally cast aside their treaty with Belgium and the other nations, and tried to rush through to France via Liege and Namur. It is a matter of history how those forts, manned by the brave sons of Belgium, stayed their progress, but it is also almost a certainty that, in August, 1914, Verdun would have put up very little more resistance, if any, than Liege did, for today, it is not the old fortress which is holding the Germans at bay, but the methods of trench defence which have been devised since the battle of the Marne.

It seems tolerably certain, therefore, that had the Germans attacked Verdun first, they would have made their way to Paris and there would have been no battle of the Marne. Had Germany taken the honest course, Great Britain would not have had her excuse to step in when she did, and probably France would have been overrun by Germans and the British coast bombarded before Britain took any action. It seems useless to dwell on what might have been, but it is interesting to note how Germany's ruthless disregard for international law at the beginning has proved her undoing.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Latest reports from the Verdun front do not point to a very cheerful celebration of Crown Prince Willie's birthday on Saturday.

The French aviators during April bagged, on an average, one German aeroplane per day, with one over, while the French lost only six during the month. In the air and on land, the French are doing wonders.

The Irish rebels gained nothing, and could never have hoped to gain anything, while they have brought about the wrecking of the best part of the fair city of Dublin.

The most important part of "Kelly's" evidence in the election enquiry is the part he refused to give, namely the name of the man who paid him to come to Vancouver and vote.

Perhaps the Bowser government will see its way to promise immunity to the man who provided the money to the "pluggers" in order that the truth may come out.

With a prospective enquiry into the Victoria election frauds, including the purchase of $22 worth of whisky by one called Harry Price, Bowser will now be figuring that the public will forget all about the twisting of contracts in connection with the Parliament Buildings.

Make Your Body Tingle with life and energy for the day's work by eating foods that contain real nutriment—that do not use up all the vitality of the body in an effort to digest them. Shredded Wheat Biscuits supplies the greatest amount of body-building, energy-creating material with the least tax upon the digestive organs. It is a real whole wheat food, ready-cooked and ready-to-serve, containing the life of the wheat grain—nothing added, nothing taken away. Start the day right by eating Shredded Wheat with hot or cold milk. Serve it for luncheon with sliced bananas or other fruits.

SPLENDID SHOW AT WESTHOLME THEATRE

Elsie Janis, in "Twins Ever Thus," scored a most decided hit at the Westholme last night. This sprightly little actress displays wonderful versatility in the role of a maiden of the stone age; a daughter of the period of crinolines, and as an up-to-date, clear-eyed young lady of the present. It was perhaps in the latter role that she was most successful, her acting of the kitchen maid being particularly clever and highly amusing. There was also a two-act drama of frontier days and an Eclair Gazette.

Tonight, the second episode of "Graft" will be shown, and there should be another full house. This week's installment deals with the "Tenement Graft" and is full of interest and clever acting.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM THE TRENCHES

teen wounded, but they were able to carry off their dead and wounded, the Germans having had enough of it.

He confesses to being at times impressed by the inhumanity of war, but not for long as they are kept very busy and the boys are so cheerful and optimistic that there is not much time for brooding. He is loud in his praises of the work which has been and is still being done by the French soldiers. The Canadian and British troops recently drafted to the front have taken over the trenches of the French in order to allow seasoned French troops to be transferred to the Verdun front. He is strongly of the opinion that the war will not last another winter.

One of the most striking scenes he has encountered is the French and Belgian farmer plowing and sowing up to within a mile of the firing line. The other day he saw a farmer sowing wheat while shells were bursting not more than a hundred yards away. Bob is looking forward to returning to Prince Rupert when his present job is over.
