INDUSTRIAL OUTLOOK

In that most comprehensive and informative handbook—"Canada, the Country of the Twentieth Century," by Watson Griffin—issued by the Minister of Trade and Commerce in Canada, there is much to justify the conclusion that long before the end of this century Canada will have a population of seventy-five million people. What Canada lacks most is settlers; men who will produce. The country has reached a stage where productive industry must find wider markets. Canadian manufacturers have now an opportunity to launch out on the world-channels of commerce that are opening up as a result of this war. All the warring nations have concentrated so largely on the trade of war that there must necessarily be a great shortage of manufactured goods for domestic and industrial purposes. The British manufacturers, for instance, are making every effort to capture the Russian market, which before the war was completely controlled by Germans. Russia is an agricultural country, and has need of all the manufactured goods that allied countries can send. With a small home market and a large increase in the number of industrial establishments, Canadian products should find a ready sale in the allied countries of Europe when peace is restored.

In the decennial period 1900-1910 there was an increase of over 31 per cent. in the number of industrial establishments in Canada, an increase of over 179 per cent. in the amount of capital invested, and an increase of over 142 per cent. in the value of products. War orders have given a tremendous impetus to trade, and it is reasonable to assume that the large profits now made will be utilized in part in building up the industrial trade of the country after the war. It is a safe prediction that at the next decennial census, in 1921, the industrial returns will show as great a percentage of growth for the present decade as for the last. On the manufacturers of Canada rests a great responsibility. Although deprived of a large share of the munition orders for the Allies, they have benefitted sufficiently to enable them to maintain stable conditions when the readjustment after the war takes place. In this way they can help Canada to carry on during a critical period, and by so doing attract to our shores desirable immigrants, who in turn will add to the wealth and general prosperity of the Dominion.—Toronto Globe.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

John L. Sullivan, the hotel-keeper who was so anxious to avert the voting of the "pluggers" in Vancouver, says that he and ex-Ald. Joe Hoskins attempted to get in touch with the "pluggers" movements but were unsuccessful. Joe Hoskins is on the Conservative executive while his son is in the Customs service. Surely, had Joe wanted to stop "pluggers" from voting he could easily have done so. There is something which wants explaining here, as Joe says he knew before the election that these men were coming from Seattle for that purpose.

Colonel Allison, the gentleman who worked just for the love of the thing, seems to have done pretty well in the business of handing out contracts. $220,000 Continued on Page Three

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS PICNIC AT TUGWELL

On Wednesday the high school students held their annual picnic to Tugwell Island. The launches Alice B. and Dixie were chartered for the occasion, and at 10:30 a merry crowd of about thirty students and teachers set out for Tugwell Island, the favorite resort for Prince Rupert picnic parties.

On the way, the boats called in at one of the islands near Metlakatla to see the figure impressed in rock of the Indian Medicine Man who fell from Heaven. This carving is certainly well worth seeing.

When Tugwell was reached, the rain clouds had disappeared and the young folks were assured of a splendid day. All kinds of games were indulged in after luncheon; baseball, football, and shooting competitions being included. Tugwell is a perfect paradise for the botanical student, and many interesting plant specimens were obtained. After a very happy day, the students reached

QUEEN OF THE MOVIES IN "MADAME BUTTERFLY"

There is a treat in store for movie patrons tonight when the Westholme presents Mary Pickford in "Madame Butterfly." John Luther Long's famous classic. Neither the play nor the actress require any introduction. In this delightful production, the dainty little "Queen of the Movies" excels any of her previous efforts. This is something not to be missed.

In addition there will be a Keystone comedy, "Little Billy's Triumph," while, at the second show, Charlie Chaplin in "The Mix Up" will be shown, tonight only. "Madame Butterfly" will, of course, be screened on Friday and Saturday.

A flashlight photo was taken of the party at Mr. Killas' expense. Since the opening of the high school four years ago, Mr. Killas has entertained the students each year on the day of their annual picnic.
