KITCHENER

It is hard to realize that the dominant figure in British military affairs is no more, while it is the irony of fate that he should have met his death by what must have been more or less an accident of the sea. Kitchener, like all strong leaders, had his critics, but firmly implanted in the British mind was a supreme confidence in the genius of the man who brought peace in Egypt; who rounded off what the late Earl Roberts planned in South Africa; who placed the Indian army on an entirely new footing, and who, in later years, reorganized British military affairs in Egypt and the Mediterranean. Kitchener was more than a soldier; he was a ruler. It cannot be said that he was loved, any more than it is possible to say that the pyramids could be loved. The feeling he engendered in his men, and in all with whom he came in contact, was one of the utmost trust. He was a leader and a ruler first, last and all the time. With an utter contempt for the officer who considered army rank from a social standpoint, Kitchener set to work to make the British army an efficient military machine, and it is no secret that, had he had his way, promotion from the ranks would long ago have been the popular procedure in the British army.

After his return from South Africa, he could have been Commander-in-Chief of the army, had he cared to follow the old rules recognized by the war office in regard to promotions. He preferred to take the minor position of command in the Mediterranean rather than submit to methods of which he did not approve.

When the present war broke out, he was practically in retirement, which he preferred to a command which was no command. At the outbreak of the war there was not a moment's doubt as to who would be the British leader. There was only one—Kitchener. So strong was his influence upon the men under him that many of the younger officers of today are known as "Kitchener's men"; men whose military training has been molded upon the Kitchener efficiency, with no frills or millinery.

The logical successor to the great soldier is Sir William Robertson, a Scotchman, who, while he may not have the genius of a Kitchener, has the ability and the necessary training to follow out what the master mind has planned. Sir William will probably be the new military commander, and the Hon. D. Lloyd George Secretary of State for War. From a military standpoint, it is fortunate that the Empire was not bereft of its leader sooner, and the greatest regret is that Earl Kitchener has not lived to reap the harvest of his labors, for it is certain that his plans for the next two years, at least, will have been carefully matured and made known to his staff. Earl Kitchener will go down to history as the greatest military leader the British Empire has ever known. He has conducted warfare on a scale never before attempted by any British commander, and, when the struggle is over, the Empire will resound with the praises of this illustrious son of Ireland.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The death of Kitchener has come too late to be of any real advantage to the Germans. Severe though the blow is, it would have been a much greater disaster had it happened a year or more ago.

The Canadian boys have brought fresh honors to the name of Canada, and, as before, have paid a terrible price.

In reading the horrible details of the fighting around Fort Vaux

What Does Your Food Cost? You could easily spend two dollars for a meal and not get as much real, body-building nutriment as you get in two Shredded Wheat Biscuits, the food that contains all the muscle-making material in the whole wheat grain prepared in a digestible form. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with milk or cream will make a complete, perfect meal at a cost of not over five cents. A food for youngsters and grown-ups. Eat it for breakfast with milk or cream; eat it for luncheon with fresh berries or other fruits; a perfect meal for the Spring days.

one cannot but feel that the Germans are being driven on by a madman.

From the latest Tory report it would appear that Bowser is going to rush matters in the next month or so. The people are ready and the result is certain. The Tory committee reports have simply made Tory defeat more sure.

Hon. William Manson is once more to enjoy a cabinet minister's salary. History will simply repeat itself and poor William will enjoy the privilege for only two short months as before.

ANOTHER MINING DEAL AT HAZELTON

The Comeau group of four claims, situated below the Hazelton View, and only a mile and a half from the railway, has been acquired by Hon. P. E. Lessard, of Edmonton, and Robert Shaw, M. P. P. for Stettler, Alberta. The deal was negotiated by B. R. Jones who held an option from the owners, D. J. Comeau, Magnus Johnson, and August Norberg.

Considerable development work has been done on the group, and excellent ore, carrying shipping values in copper, gold and silver has been uncovered. The present workings will probably be continued, pending the report of George Clothier, who is examining the property and will advise the operators as to development. It is probable that a 500-foot tunnel will be driven at the foot of the hill, giving good depth on the ore.—Omineca Miner

"THE NATURE MAN" AT WESTHOLME THEATRE

"The Nature Man" at the Westholme tonight is one of the most remarkable stories of the woods ever presented to the public. It is a tale of primitive man battling against nature. The scenery is magnificent, the staging of this wonderful picture being superb.

There is an enjoyable "Royal" comedy and a Ford monthly Gazette, making up a show of more than average merit.
