ATLIN VISITED BY ANOTHER BIG FIRE

On Thursday, the town of Atlin was swept by fire and a large part of the town destroyed. The blaze started in the Royal Hotel owned by Mr. Schultz and spread to the adjoining stores. Kershaw's hardware store was wiped out and Pillman's general store, J. Eggert's jewelry store, James' bakery and McIntosh's grocery. Mr. Eggert is the father of Dr. Eggert of this city. His store was also destroyed in the big fire of two years ago.

FISH AND POLITICAL SPECIAL THIS MORNING

Bowser and his staff left for Terrace this morning on the fish special which left about six a. m. It was too bad that they had to leave so early as it prevented citizens from going down to bid them farewell. Proximity to four carloads of fish and ice must have reminded each one of them of the meeting on Saturday night.

A soldier who tried to seize the flag was roughly handled but ultimately a force of policemen captured the flag. A struggle between the Sinn Feiners and the police ensued, in which the Sinn Feiners wrested the green flag from the police and marched back in triumph to the Hibernian Hall, where they dispersed.

STALWART YUKONERS ON WAY TO VICTORIA

The Prince George, from Alaskan ports this morning, had a capacity passenger list, including 158 members of Commissioner Black's company of Yukoners. The boys from the north are a stalwart lot and will make a splendid showing when they get to the front. On the way out they met Commissioner Black going north to carry on recruiting. This morning's party was in charge of Lieut. Hullam. Their mascot is a husky, while one member of the company has two splendid wolf-dogs with him. He hopes that they may be used at the front in some capacity as they are great workers.

The Yukoners will go into camp at The Willows on arrival in the south and will be transferred later to Sydney.

NEW HAZELTON COY. IS GETTING BUSY

The New Hazelton Gold and Cobalt Mining Co. is the incorporated name of the company formed by A. Erskin Smith and associates to develop the Hazelton View and Indian groups on Roche de Boule. The properties were visited this week by A. Erskin Smith, Geo. E. Trorey, Chas. E. Berg, Albert Shaw and Archie Smith. They spent several days looking them over and while here let contracts for the camp and survey. Duke Harris will build the camp and already has men at work. Dalby Morkill has been engaged to survey the wagon road to the railway. When these are ready work will commence on a tunnel to open the properties and a surface tramway is also contemplated.

These properties were recently bonded by Mr. Smith. The Harris Bros. gave the bond on the Hazelton View and D. McLeod on the Indian group.—Omineca Herald.

FISHING DEADLOCK WILL BE CLEARED UP

Mayor McCaffery, who is naturally anxious to have the question of the shipment of halibut to Seattle in bond cleaned up, in order that the American companies here may get down to business again, interviewed W. P. Hinton, of the G. T. P., this morning in the matter.

Mr. Hinton informed the mayor that the conference at Ottawa on Friday was entirely satisfactory and that everything would be put right shortly. The difficulty arose through John Macdougall, of the Customs service in Vancouver, wiring J. H. McLeod that, according to an old order-in-council, all bonded American fish must be shipped by rail only.

The reason for this is that fish in bond must be under seal and the coast steamers have no facilities for placing quantities of fish under seal, as is done on rail. The American firms here have been in the habit of shipping their small fish to Seattle by steamer, and the order from Vancouver naturally upset their business tremendously. Ottawa realizes that it is ridiculous to expect the Americans to do business here unless they are allowed to ship by steamer in bond and Mr. Hinton reports that the matter will be put right at once.

SERIOUS FIRE LOSS TO ANGLICAN CLERGYMAN

The Rev. Edwin Gillman, the Anglican clergyman at Chilco, in the Nechaco Valley, has met with a serious loss. His stable and barn with all their contents were destroyed by fire last Tuesday night. A passing traveller asked permission to put up his horse in the stable. Refusing the offer of a lantern be lighted a match, and, thinking it out, threw it down. About an hour afterward Mrs. Gillman was awakened by the glare of light. Saddles, harness, tools, sleigh, hens, and a pig were all lost. The neighbors are kindly offering to help in getting fresh logs for a new barn.

WILSON CALLS OUT AMERICAN MILITIA

(Special to The Daily News.)
Washington, June 19.—President Wilson has called out the militia of every state in the Union and it is estimated that one hundred and forty-five thousand men are now under arms for service on the Mexican border. This action of the President is on account of the disturbed condition of affairs along the border and in order that American citizens there may be assured of ample protection.

Carranza's Force.

Carranza's force, which is estimated to be about five thousand strong, is at Villa Ahumda, on the Mexican National Railway, south of Juarez and five hundred Mexican troops are stationed opposite Yseleta, near El Paso.

GERMAN-AMERICANS MAY FAVOR HUGHES

(Special to The Daily News.)
Washington, June 19.—The Cologne Gazette, an influential German paper, says that German-Americans, on whose votes the decision in the presidential election rests, will favor Hughes, as they now have an opportunity of repaying President Wilson for his false and hypocritical neutrality and for the attacks made upon their American nationality.

BOWSER AND HIS MINISTERS ARE GIVEN COLD SHOULDER

HUGE AUDIENCE MAINTAINED GRIM SILENCE OR WAS OPENLY HOSTILE—CHEERS FOR MACDONALD BUT NONE FOR BOWSER—THOMSON MAKES A BAD BREAK

Just how to take the Bowser pow-wow of Saturday is an open question. If it was a Tory missionary meeting, it was a joke, but as a variety entertainment it was rather a success. The audience was large; absolutely unresponsive for the most part and at times openly hostile. As a serious affair, the meeting slipped up from the rise of the curtain. As the screen rolled up and revealed the five Tories on the stage, three or four of the audience showed a disposition to applaud, but they quit when they found that they were making themselves conspicuous.

We have to hand a bouquet to Ald. Nelson for the way he handled the meeting in introducing Bowser, but he got away to a bad start when he apologized for the fact that Joe Merryfield was not in the chair. He also explained that other Tories were at the front, (Joe was evidently at the back) but he did not explain why other local Tories had stayed off the platform. Another notable absentee was the Hon. Dr. Young. "Doc" evidently preferred to remain by the stove and watch the coal burn.

Hon. Billy Ross said his piece first. He said he had been told to try and make a sound like a fish. He certainly looked like a fish a long way from sea. By way of apology for the fact that the public have to pay the travelling expenses of the troupe, he said that they were trying to find out what the different districts wanted. The only piece of information he gleaned at the meeting was that Prince Rupert did not want Bowser or Bowserism. Billy touched very lightly on the work of the session and spoke with great restraint. He never seemed to warm up, but the icy coldness of the audience was probably responsible for this. Then he had to be careful, as he has been rehearsing P. G. E. speeches for weeks past and he dared not mention P. G. E. in Prince Rupert. He quit abruptly and saved the situation.

At this point, W. P. Lynch said that as the ministers were there to discuss the affairs of the province he would like some information and would also like to say a few words. The chairman refused the request, and Mr. Lynch said that he would have other opportunities.

H. B. Thomson, of Victoria, who put up the anti-prohibition scrap in order to hold the liquor vote, was next. He looks like Sol Cameron stretched out, and is probably about as good a public speaker as Sol. He broached the question of the public accounts enquiry, claiming that the Liberals had shown up nothing corrupt, concluding with the following illuminating statement: "SINCE THEY WERE THREE MONTHS ON THE JOB AND FOUND OUT NOTHING, THEY MUST BE 'DUBS'."

He then developed the resources of the province in real Dick McBride fashion, finishing up in the drydock. When he expatiated on the drydock, the audience simply rocked with merriment, and he utterly failed to see that they were not laughing at the dock, but at the fact that a stranger would try to peddle to Prince Rupert people what they had been peddling to strangers for years. He resumed his seat chilled to the bone.

Hon. William Manson provided the next turn, starting out like a beginner on skates who fears the ice is thin. His remarks were taken with a big smile until he dwelt upon the great work of the session, when the audience got tired and started to live things up. When he mentioned the Vancouver "plugging," someone called for three cheers for Macdonald, which were given with a will. A lone voice suggested the same for Bowser but there was a dead, cold silence.

Premier Bowser followed. He started out like a bather entering ice cold water. He was obviously nervous and short of breath and gasped as the chill got around his heart. He said he was not well, though he was not sick politically. He admitted that he had been a little sick after the by-elections. (A voice, "You bet you were").

After congratulating the city on the selling of its bonds, he dealt with the salmon monopoly, suggesting the time-honored Royal Commission cure. He then attacked T. D. Pattullo, quoting from a letter which appeared in The Daily News of June 2nd. He ineffectively sought to lay the blame for the Vancouver "plugging" on the Liberals, and tried to connect Mr. Pattullo with someone named Lawler, stating that Mr. Pattullo had gone south with him and had stayed at the same hotel. When he insinuated that Mr. Pattullo was implicated in the "plugging," the audience rose at him and demanded that he take back the statement. When he tried to insist there were cries of "Pattullo is clean," and "We know Pattullo." He then switched to Gosden but found that he had stepped on more trouble, as he was hailed with calls of "Johnny
