SPLENDID SHOW AT MAJESTIC THEATRE

"Shadows of the Past," the Vitagraph feature at the Majestic tonight, is an intensely dramatic political play in which Anita Stewart scores a great success. There is not a dull moment throughout the three acts and the final scene, in which the villain's auto smashes into a train, which the heroine's machine has just escaped, is thrilling in the extreme.

"The Bell Hop" is a most laughable comedy and "Fair, Fat and Saucy" keeps the fun going. "A Daughter of Barth," an interesting two-act drama in which Gretchen Hartman leads, completes a real good show.
