GREAT HUMAN INTEREST STORY AT THE MAJESTIC

"Man's Prerogative," the four-act drama at the Majestic tonight, is a remarkably fine production. Robert Edeson, as a famous lawyer and man-about-town, marries a young lady who has won fame as a magazine writer. The lawyer has led a Bohemian life before marriage and expects that he can do the same thing afterwards, without his wife having any cause for complaint. He flirts with an artist's model without a qualm, but the moment he suspects his wife of being on friendly terms with the artist though she is quite innocent, he leaves her. The story is convincingly told and the acting of Edeson and his wife is magnificent. There are splendid scenes of various phases of Bohemian life and a tragic ending as the model shoots her artist friend in a fit of jealousy. The dying man tells the lawyer of the absolute innocence of his wife and the two re-unite over the death-bed of their child, whom the father has never seen. It is a play full of pathos and rich in the human element.

A lively two-act Keystone comedy and a Mutual Weekly which shows the latest Parisian fashions; Belgian cavalry crossing a river; ice sports, and many other interesting items, completes a fine show, in which the music of the Balagno-Stilwell orchestra is one of the most enjoyable features. There is a special musical program for tonight.
