THRILLING DRAMA AT THE MAJESTIC THEATRE

"The Hammer," one of the two-act features at the Majestic tonight, is a remarkable story. A company of impecunious artists in a boarding house have been threatened by the landlord, on account of back rent being unpaid. A lady stenographer takes up her quarters in the house and after nailing up her sign, lays the hammer on the bannister. It drops on the head of the landlord below and kills him. One of the artists is arrested for murder and then follows a great detective story with of course a happy ending.

"A Leap for Life" has thrills enough for anyone, while "Love's Strategy" and "Business is Business" are full of fun. "In the Conservatory" depicts the very latest in society dances. There is a superb musical program by the Balagno-Stillwell orchestra.

CALL FROM PACIFIC

Harry Love, of the Imperial Machine Shop, is evidently well known along the coast as a repair man. Late last night he received a wireless from the Vancouver tug Samson, Captain Olson, asking if he could supply brass castings and repair a propeller shaft. Harry replied that he could repair anything, or something to that effect, and is now waiting a reply. The Samson had encountered the steamer North Western, bound for Cordova to Seattle, suffering from crank shaft trouble.

BRITAIN'S ANSWER TO ALL QUESTIONS

In thinking of "Britain Prepared," you must not compare it with any war picture you have ever seen. It is vastly different. The series of ten magnificent reels were taken by command of the British War Office and Admiralty and not by any firm of moving picture people for profit. You will remember that there was a demand in certain quarters as to what Britain was doing. She had no conscription and a small army. Her fleet was "somewhere in the North Sea," but was silent. The question was asked by many Continental newspapers, "What is Britain doing?" Those pictures form part of the reply, while the Kitchener army and the Jutland battle made up a good deal of the rest of the answer.

You are actually taken aboard of the "Queen Elizabeth" in the Dardanelles; you have the experience of chasing an enemy aeroplane, without any of the risks; you meet Sir John Jellicoe on his own quarter-deck in the North Sea; you see the wasp-like destroyers circling round the battleships and so on. You view ships through the periscope of a submarine and have no end of new and intensely interesting experiences. They will be screened at the Westholme Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday and if you go on Wednesday, the probability is that you will go back on Thursday. Many people in Vancouver saw the series several times, at a dollar a time.
