MERMAID HAD SWIM IN HARBOR MONDAY

Some folks around the government wharf thought they saw a mermaid swimming in the harbor on Monday afternoon, as, just off the float of the Prince Rupert Boat House, a smiling face, lit up by two laughing blue eyes, appeared, the whole surmounted by a cute bathing cap which barely hid a mass of silken tresses. The boys became still more interested when the figure made for the float; clambered aboard; grabbed a rain coat and a towel, and skipped up to the government wharf and aboard the Princess Sophia.

It seems that the young lady was one of the tourists bound for Alaska; she was a good swimmer and the water looked tempting. There were not many folks around so she donned a bathing suit on board and was into the water before anyone realized just what had happened. On coming out, she admitted that the water was a trifle cold but declared that she had enjoyed the swim immensely.

A good Universal Weekly completes a fine show. Tomorrow is Red Feather night and Chaplin will be here on Friday.
