THE SILENT WOMAN

Far away, on a little island in the mid-Pacific, a band of heroic women are at work doing more than their share to support the British flag and the institutions of their "soldier boys" and forbears. Wherever they go, on land or sea, they are everlastingly knitting, knitting, to provide footwear for the "Canucks at the front." With their little satchels full of wool, and the two knitting needles, they sit and converse, wherever they may be, until each night finds a new pair of socks for shipment to the Red Cross society in the neighborhood. Once each week they all meet at the house of a member of the society, where the hostess provides "afternoon tea" for the male visitors, and a collection is taken up. Dances, concerts, raffles and every other means of raising funds are resorted to. During the two years of the war this small band of devoted women sent hundreds of pairs of woollen socks to the soldiers in France. They have raised $1,000 in hard cash and each contributed to the social events from their own purses. All money subscribed goes to the Red Cross society—the expenses are paid by those who, in turn, give the entertainments. These "Silent Women" have no newspaper to bring before the public the many acts of patriotism and charity performed. Communication with the outer world is by a fortnightly mail steamer. In other settlements, the women are doing little for the relief of the "Boys in Khaki." They do not appear to understand that a good pair of woollen socks is appreciated, and may save a man, next winter, from frostbite, which means a "man short in the trenches." If ever women deserve the thanks of those high in authority, it is the women of Queen Charlotte City. Every one of them has been working for over a year—knitting, and knitting. Box after box of socks is going out and there are no contractors to receive commissions from the output of the most necessary clothing. Queen Charlotte City is at the south end of Graham Island, in this province. Visiting the place, at stated times, the ladies were always seen with their work, and it was remarkable to view the number of articles of apparel they make from the strings of wool they use. A number of the men contribute a stated sum monthly to the Red Cross fund, which they have been doing for the past two years. It is safe to assert that Graham Island also sent the largest quota of soldiers to the front, of any part of Canada, considering the population at the commencement of the war. Deserted pre-emptions may be seen on all sides. From one a mother and her son went to Europe at the beginning of the war—the one for the ranks, the other as a nurse. A pretty little cottage stands on a neck of cleared land. Out from the cottage went a young pre-emptor, leaving his wife and child, "to keep the home fires burning." He died in Ypres; the widow and child are now with relatives, in some other place. Two brothers closed the door of their shack, on a pre-emption in the woods; both enlisted and one is recovering from seven wounds. A former captain in the British army heard the call at his home on Massett Inlet. Away he went and is now sleeping beneath a wooden cross in France. One of the best woodsmen in the country locked his door, when a launch reached his landing. A military officer was on the launch, looking for recruits. The woodsman asked no questions further than to obtain a passage outside. "Where are you going?" asked the officer. "Where do you suppose?" was the reply. "I'm just going to have a crack at those Germans," and he is in the officer's company now. All of the small towns are depleted. The pre-emptions are deserted. It has been all outgo of men and money; but the "Good and Silent Women still ply their knitting needles," and all are working for the common cause—the safety of an Empire, which means the Peace of the World.—Vancouver Sun.

The Royal Standard Test
Here's where we test the choicest samples of Canada's six million acre wheat crop. We grind them into flour in the little mill you see on the left of the picture. Then comes the supreme test—bread-baking. If the bread is perfect in every way we pronounce the wheat A1 and the flour—ROYAL STANDARD.
