CANADA'S PART

The municipality of Charlesbourg, Quebec, has passed a resolution opposing conscription and saying that Canada has now done its part in the war. This being a free country, this council of this little municipality is perfectly at liberty to express its opinions on any subject; in fact, only by such free expression of opinion can the thoughts of any community be made known to the other parts of the Dominion.

By stating that Canada has now done its part in the war, this little municipality is telling the world that Charlesbourg, or rather Charlesburg, town council, does not intend to do any more. The statement shows clearly that the aldermen of this little burg do not yet realize what Canada has done, nor do they realize what Canada and the Empire has yet to do. Canada's part in the war is not the giving of a certain number of recruits, nor the supporting of the Imperial forces for any given time, but the giving wholeheartedly of her last man and her last dollar in the cause of liberty and justice. Canada is doing her part nobly, though some sections of the Dominion are doing more than others, but that part has not been done fully until the iron heel of the Teuton has been lifted from France and Belgium, and the Hun invader has been driven across the Rhine from whence he came.

The people of Charlesbourg are undoubtedly largely of French origin. They are probably of that small section of the French people in Canada who have become so wrapped up in their own supposed grievances and the idea of French Nationalism in Canada, that they have forgotten they are really French and Canadians. Had these men been still in the land of their fathers, would they have said today that France has done enough? If they did, they would be unworthy of the name and noble traditions of France. Had they been in Alsace or Lorraine, whence their fathers probably came, would they today be declaring that the French in Alsace and Lorraine had done enough and that they must do no more to drive out the Teuton?

The people of Charlesbourg have forgotten that they are French; have forgotten that they are Canadians, and, in their narrow racialism, fostered by such traitors to the noble French race and to Canada, as Bourassa and his like, have lost their vision of the future and the memory of their past.

The future of Canada depends entirely upon the vanquishing of the Prussianism which has brought such suffering upon the people of France and Belgium. If the people of Charlesbourg are satisfied that Canada should come under the rule of the Prussian, then, and then only, can they say that Canada has done her part. As that noble patriot, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, so ably expressed it in Montreal recently, if they do not want to fight for Britain and do not want to fight for France, then surely they must want to fight for themselves. The resolution passed by this little municipality is the result of gross ignorance of the whole situation, coupled with the ill-feeling which has been fostered by the men whom Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues took under their wing, that they might be successful in fighting the patriotic Laurier in Quebec in 1911. The pandering of Borden and his followers to the men who declared that they would shoot holes in the Union Jack is largely responsible for the state of feeling which prevails in many small communities in Quebec today. Fortunately, it is not a feeling which fills the hearts of the great majority of the French people in Canada. When proper recruiting methods have been adopted in Quebec, it will be found that the French-Canadians of that province are Canadians through and through and that they are ready to fight to the last for Canada; for France, and the Empire of which they form a part.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Premier Bowser has at last made up his mind to resign. It is too bad that he has been at last obliged to relinquish his hold upon the affairs of the province, but he must realize that the people really do not want him.

Emperor Franz Josef seems to be really and truly dead at last. This aged and infirm ruler of the Hapsburgs has been reported dead oftener than any other ruler in history and it would be interesting to know just when he died. It is reported that he has been dead for many months.

Sir Sam Hughes has gone to Quebec on a recruiting expedition. Sam has a habit of talking too much and, for Sir Robert's sake, it is to be hoped that he does not tell all he knows about how things have been conducted in Ottawa.

The United States Hughes has taken a long time to make up his

The Royal Standard Test

Here's where we test the choicest samples of Canada's six million acre wheat crop. We grind them into flour in the little mill you see on the left of the picture. Then comes the supreme test—bread-baking. If the bread is perfect in every way we pronounce the wheat A1 and the flour—ROYAL STANDARD.
