MUSINGS

BY MACK

In the rich life-giving Canadian sunshine yesterday afternoon I chanced on a tiny girl with pretty flaxen curls, big dark, enquiring eyes, and a dainty baby mouth with a whole lot of coming feminine character in its dainty little curves. She was watching her son, Naas River Points, Masset, daddy building a boat. His was perhaps the most interesting occupation in the whole world for Refuge Bay, Skidegate, Queen a man. Hers was surely one of Charlotte City, Lockeport, Pacofi, Jedway, Ikeda Bay, Rose the most interesting of the million Harbor and return via Queen and one occupations there are for Charlotte City every Saturday, babies, which we absurdly serious grown-ups so foolishly forget. lives after.

I watched the wee hands with their tiny pink fingers working . away busily in the sunshine with lowing ladies were present: Mrs. FAMOUS PRINCESS LINE those delightfully curly shavings. Birnie, Mrs. Payton, Mrs. Derry, Canadian Pacific Railway - B.C. Coast Steamship Service Only once or twice did the big Princess May dark baby eyes peep up wonderingly in my direction. The little lady had much more use for she had for a clumsy man-creature. Nothing in the world worried her, except perhaps Reilly's Bakery Lunch the sensible Irish terrier who came and kissed her because he was Irish and gallant, and she looked good to him.

All over the world wherever the afternoon sun shines warmly, wherever there are kindly, busy daddies building boats or mending boots there are small girls with chubby baby fingers toying with priceless baby treasures of shavings, or rose-leaves or buttons and string. In the alleys and squares of oldworld capitals, in the gardens and grass-plots of rising Canadian cities, in Europe, Asia, Africa and America as you are reading this very line, there are baby fingers cuddling worthless trifles of inestimable value in big wondering baby eyes. Surely the sunshine loves to linger on the bonnie wee people as it turns their shavings to leaf-gold, and their flower petals to fairy dresses. Surely baby-girls who play in the sunshine, store Fire, Life and Plate Glass Insurance.
