HINDENBERG MAY TRY RUSSIA AGAIN

man Russian party were turned topsy-turvy. Since then the Entente has been working to obtain control of the Duma. The revolution which has just ended decides the biggest question of the war so far as Russia is concerned. It rivets the Russian flag to the Entente mast. It destroys the German hope of separate peace and challenges von Hindenburg to make good his promise of a "defeated Russia," for one of the reasons why von Hindenburg succeeded Falkenhayn as chief of the Central Powers' General Staff was that he promised final victory against Russia.

Hindenburg's Scheme.

His policy, it is believed in Berlin, is to hold the Allies on the western front, as he did on the Somme and Ancre last year, and to launch as great an offensive as possible against the forces of Russia. Von Hindenburg has been waiting for the revolution. He may imagine the Russian forces demoralized by internal affairs and at last the time "ripe" for a dashing, ruthless German advance. But it appears that the Allies have anticipated Germany's plans and have won the revolution in Russia. The Duma now will have an opportunity to reorganize Russia's crippled transportation system and put new life into the Russian army. The revolution is the most encouraging sign for the Allies in Russia, but the real crisis is still to come. The acid test will be the power of the Russian people and the new Russian government to withstand a German offensive. The Russian line, which stretches from the Gulf of Riga to the Black Sea, is considered by German military observers to be vulnerable at two points—one on the Sereth river in Roumania, the other in Volhynia, on the Stockhod river, where General Brusiloff made his successful offensive against Austria last fall. Success on the Sereth would give Germany control of the transportation lines to the Stockhod front and open the way for a move on Odessa. This port the Central Powers covet because they believe it would give them control of the Russian Black Sea Fleet.

The revolution has brought about a military crisis, with possibilities for both the Entente and Germany, but the indications are that von Hindenburg will have to make the first move.
