THE CIVIL SERVICE ACT

The Civil Service Act is undoubtedly one of the most important measures which will be considered and adopted this session, and will effect a sweeping reform in the method of appointment to the public service, as well as in the organization and transaction of the country's business. It should also lead to an immense saving in expenditure in the management of the various departments of government. The expenditure on civil government in British Columbia for the year 1913-14 was $1,229,707, in addition to salaries for the administration of justice, $57,848. For the same year, civil government cost Ontario $790,999 and Quebec $582,432. Since then, the disparity has greatly increased, our civil service expenditure for last year having mounted to nearly one and three-quarters of a million dollars.

Not many measures have been launched in the British Columbia Legislature under such favorable auspices as those which make smooth the pathway of the Civil Service bill. It has behind it the unmistakable mandate of the public, disgusted with the domination of the service by a political machine; it is backed by the exigencies of the financial situation, whose calls for economy and efficiency no longer can be ignored without courting disaster. It is not an easy thing for any party government to tear up by the roots a system which has flourished in a country for years and upon a continuance of which is some form or other a proportion of its followers may still regard with friendly eye. But Mr. Brewster's task becomes less difficult in the light of the public response to the pledge he gave on this subject.

The demand for Civil Service reform has spread rapidly throughout the world during the last few years, especially in those countries where the spoils system has been carried to extremes. In the United States there has been a strong reaction in this direction. The taxpayers, awake to the fact that their funds were being expended without regard to value received, began to ask why a dollar spent by a well-managed private corporation went three times as far as a dollar spent by governments. They discovered that they themselves were to blame, that as long as they indicated that they were satisfied with that condition the consideration of value would play a very small part in the expenditure of their money. As the result of agitation for public services based upon merit and ability, Civil Service reforms have been carried out by many states across the line and are now being extended to the services of numerous municipalities.

The main object of the Act is to substitute appointments by merit, ascertained in part by competitive examination, for appointment as a reward for political service, or through nepotism and similar ulterior motives. The Act has been drafted by Professor Adam Shortt, a distinguished historian and economist who has also given many years to the study of civil service reform, and whose experience as administrator under the federal Act is invaluable. Professor Shortt has not only given the province the best service of which he is capable in drawing the Act, but has added to our obligation and his claims on our esteem by affording the province his aid and advice quite gratuitously. This is a new experience for British Columbia, and one that will be heartily appreciated.

Dr. Shortt has devoted years to a close study of the various systems in force throughout the world, especially that of the United Kingdom, while his practical experience as Dominion Civil Service Commissioner has enabled him to take note of local conditions in the preparation of the measure. The province is deeply indebted to him for his inestimable services.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN AT WESTHOLME THEATRE

At the Westholme tonight is to be screened Charlie Chaplin in his latest triumph. The comic has no better exponent than Charlie Chaplin and his popularity increases with every new film. His unconscious absurdities raise roars of laughter, and as a tonic against the grouch, Charlie is supreme. In addition, Valentine Grant also appears in the well-known Scottish play, "The Daughter of MacGregor." The title con-

Getting Johnnie off to School and husband off to business are problems that tax the nerves and strength of the housewife who runs her own home. So easy and delightful if you know Shredded Wheat Biscuit, the ready-cooked, ready-to-eat whole wheat food. Children like its delicious, crisp aroma when served with hot milk. It is ready-cooked and ready-to-eat.

Made in Canada.

...jures up visions of Rob Roy's wife Helen, who threatened to chop the magistrate into as many pieces as there were checks in the tartan. The play is in five acts and will appeal to everyone. The whole programme is a very attractive one.
