UNCLE SAM'S PROBLEM

The problem of dealing with internal trouble in the event of war between the United States and Germany is giving the Washington Government no little concern. Some steps of a tentative character already have been taken. Two lists of Germans in the country to be dealt with have been prepared, one enumerating those who should be interned immediately and the other consisting of persons to be watched. Neither of these lists is complete and the facilities of the Secret Service are limited. On the other hand the German population is numerous and widely distributed.

The total number of Germans in the United States, estimated on the basis of the census of 1910, is 8,282,618, of which 2,501,181 are foreign born. Of the latter, New York has the largest proportion, 436,874. Illinois is third with 233,384, with Pennsylvania, Michigan and Minnesota following in the order named. Iowa has 98,758, Missouri, 88,224, and California 76,305. The total includes more than 300,000 reservists, many of whom may be storm centres, and every one of whom, therefore, would have to be interned immediately war developed between the two countries.

There are thus numerous elements of combustion in the neighboring republic, even if the majority of foreign-born Germans behave themselves. The problem would be complicated by the fact that German sympathizers in many quarters not improbably hold positions of trust which would enable them to facilitate conspiracies calculated to hamper the country in its prosecution of war. At the same time there is little doubt that German agents caught in acts of treachery would be swiftly punished. Where the processes of the courts were regarded as too dilatory the loyalists would take matters into their own hands and initiate the culprits into the simple ceremonies of the law as administered by Judge Lynch.

LIKE COMMON MALEFACTORS

A French deputy has introduced a resolution providing for the establishment of an international tribunal for the trial and punishment of those responsible for the war and the innumerable atrocious acts authorized by them during the struggle. That is to say, the German Emperor, the Crown Prince and all the other members of the warband who survive should be dealt with according to the elementary laws common to all civilized nations, particular attention being given to the instigators and agents of frightfulness.

We shall be very greatly mistaken if some such action as this is not demanded by the peoples of the various Entente states and any government which in its attitude towards the murderbund of Potsdam adheres to the time-honored practice of treating beaten malefactors with punctilious courtesy and respect would meet with a very hard fate. Before the war is over the whole outside world will be against Germany, owing to her violation of every canon of humanity and decency. In sentiment it is already against her. Her responsible leaders are regarded as criminals of the deepest dye in every country except her own and the states allied to her. These men should be punished as such if they should survive the wrath of their own people. Let the world go on record as wiping out the distinction hitherto made between criminals in war and criminals in peace, between state morality and private morality. Let kings, emperors and dictators realize that they are no more immune from summary execution for heinous crimes perpetrated in the name of war than Gyp the Blood was for his criminality, and one source of danger to world peace will be materially checked.

An international body for the maintenance of peace should have the power to punish those who break its laws. In the case of Germany, Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey it is possible of course, that there will be no opportunity of teaching a never-to-be-forgotten lesson in this respect. Revolutions may save the world the trouble; they may make an even cleaner sweep of the Prussian and Magyar militarists than the French revolution made of the Bourbons; many refugees from France found a shelter in England and there will be no such haven for proscribed Prussians. But if the pitiless ruffians who authorized the murder of women and children in this war, who sank hospital ships, who poisoned wells, who executed Edith Cavell and Captain Fryatt, survive an uprising at home, they should be gibbeted as summarily as the meanest criminal according to the laws of the nations they have outraged.

ANOTHER SPEECH BY BETHMANN-HOLLWEG

Berlin, April 2.—Declaring in the Reichstag that Germany had undertaken unrestricted submarine warfare in her own defence, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Chancellor, said:

"If the American nation considers this a cause for which to declare war against the German nation, with which it has lived in peace for more than 100 years, if this action warrants an increase of bloodshed, we shall not have to bear the burden of responsibility for it."

"Germany never had the slightest intention of attacking the United States of America, and has not such an intention now. It never desired war against the United States of America and does not desire it today."
