THE EMPIRE AS A BUSINESS CONCERN

London, May 4.—Sir Owen Phillips, M. P., presided at a luncheon given to Right Hon. Walter Long, Colonial Secretary, and Hon. Robert Rogers, Canadian Minister of Public Works, by the British Empire Producers.

Mr. Long dwelling on the lessons of the war, said that one of its bitter lessons was that if we had only realized the vast possibilities of the Empire in the days before the war, our position today would be much stronger than it is at present. Moreover, he said, the duration of the war would be materially shortened. All our resources should be available for the needs of the Empire. It was now realized, he added, that in addition to ships and soldiers the Empire wanted a great mercantile marine. The Empire should be regarded as a business concern and not left solely in the hands of politicians. "We have been hitherto too hospitable to foreigners; we must be more vigilant in the future," concluded the Colonial Secretary.
