FOOD FOR THE ALLIES

Nobody knows the food situation better than Mr. Hoover. United States food administrator, and probably nobody knows it as well for practical purposes. He is altogether competent, therefore, to instruct this continent on its duty in the present emergency. Recently he issued a report in which he stated that on North America rested the brunt of the burden of supplying the Allies with the human and animal food necessary to maintain their great armies in fighting condition as well as to keep alive and efficient the families of the fighters and the great industrial army at home.
