FIGHTING MEN

the first contingent of fighting men from the United States in France will be hailed throughout the Allied nations. There can be no doubt whatever now regarding the final outcome of the great war, even in the minds of the most pro-German of the neutrals. The United States are now in the fight to stay; and it is to be hoped that their entry will mark the last phase of the conflict.

Encircled as they are by the armies of the free peoples of this world, the Central Powers, and the systems for which they stand, cannot hope to survive. Once and for all, Governments which govern without the consent of the governed will be banished from Europe.

The great strength of the United States is bound to hasten the end of hostilities, and of the sacrifices of life which are being offered up daily. There will be no question of the United States troops going into the fight badly armed, or without artillery support. They will be in a posi-! tion to profit by the mistakes of and the experience of the Allies in this modern warfare, which is so much more terrible than any heretofore. For the two years previous to their entry into the quarrel, the factories of the United States were
