the way of important attacks in rainy weather, which must be overcome by the size of the fleet. It must be remembered that unless aero invaders are able to destroy important war material the bombs dropped can at best produce only a moral effect. In view of the precautions that have been taken in England and also in France to conceal such material and of the difficulties under which Zeppelin raids must be effected, these air leviathans seem hardly to he worth the time and money that have been expended on them .- By E. Percy Noel.
