PARTICULARLY FINE SHOW AT MAJESTIC

The Majestic has a particularly fine five-reel feature for tonight in "The Morals of Marcus." It is one of the Famous Player productions and is one of the best that company has ever produced. The story is of an English girl, who, from childhood, has been brought up in the seclusion of a Turkish home, but escapes when her foster father wants to sell her to an ancient Turk. She is aided in her escape by an Englishman who takes her to England and suddenly deserts her, at the urgent request of the police, who have desired his company for some time.

Left stranded without money in a strange land, she wanders about and finally stumbles across a philosopher and friend in the person of Sir Marcus, an ex-school master who has unexpectedly fallen heir to an estate and a baronetcy. She takes up her abode at his home and refuses to budget, much to the discomfiture of the aunt and cousin of Marcus. The piece is rich in humorous and exciting incidents and was greatly enjoyed last night. Marie Doro, as Carlotta, the Anglo-Turkish maiden, acts magnificently, while the perplexed philosopher, who is never quite sure whether to be shocked or delighted, is splendidly portrayed by Eugene Ormonde. This picture is well worth seeing.

GOVERNOR SLATEN OF GEORGIA PASSED THROUGH

Among the tourists returning from a round trip of Alaska and intervening points on board the City of Seattle bound south last evening, was Mr. Geo. Slaten, governor of Georgia. Mr. Slaten availed himself of the opportunity of taking an auto ride over the townsite, although the time limit was less than a half-hour. The governor expressed himself as being agreeably surprised and delighted with the city. He had no idea that such advancement had been made at the terminal of the G. T. P., and ventured the opinion that the city should have a bright future ahead of it, notwithstanding the slight check felt on account of the war.

Mr. Slaten for the past few months has been much in the public eye, on account of his refusal to sanction the death of the prisoner Leo M. Frank, found guilty of the murder of Mary Phagan, an Atlanta factory girl. Frank was sentenced to life imprisonment, and now lies at death's door from being attacked by one of the inmates of the prison, who was also serving a life sentence. Frank is likely to recover.

J. Brown, chief freight clerk on the City of Seattle, is in the Prince Rupert hospital suffering from an attack of appendicitis.
