CHANNEL TUNNEL

The driving of a tunnel under the English Channel from Dover to Calais has long been a subject of debate both in England and France. In 1876, it was agreed to make a start on the project and work was actually commenced, but a formidable opposition to the scheme was set up in the British House of Commons. The leader of the opposition was the late Lord Wolseley, who in a fighting speech, in which he dwelt upon the danger of invasion from France through the proposed tunnel, launched the famous phrase "splendid isolation" and said he did not want "an invasion of England." He carried his point for the British prejudice against the French was at that time still strong.

The question has again been raised by the French, and there is not the slightest doubt that, if the project could be carried through in quick time, it would receive the heartiest support of every Britisher. Such a tunnel would be of inestimable benefit in the transporting of troops and supplies to France and Flanders. The distance from Dover to Calais is only twenty-one miles and in a few hours munitions trains and troop trains could be landed in the heart of the battlefield, without the slightest delay or danger from German submarines.

It will take many years to build such a tunnel, but, after the war, there is a big possibility that the scheme will be approved by both nations and proceeded with. It would undoubtedly be a great commercial asset both to Britain and France and would do away with the dirtiest steamer voyage on the coasts of Britain.

LEMBERG

The capturing of Brody by the Russians is the most important event on the eastern front for many weeks, as it heralds an early attack upon Lemberg which already has been in Russian hands since the outbreak of the war. It is certain that the enemy will put up a desperate fight at the crossing of the Bug River, but nothing can stop the Russian advance, as the Czar's armies are much better equipped than the Austro-Germans and that Lemberg will again be in Russian hands at no distant date is as certain as anything can be in war.

From Lemberg, with its four railroads, the attack will lead on to Przemyśl, the scene of many weeks of fierce fighting in the earlier stages of the war. Przemyśl was so badly shattered by the Russians in their first long attack that they found it impossible to defend it against the counter-attacks of the enemy. The Germans have had ample time to throw up, or rather dig down, up-to-date and strong defences, but, with their big new guns and copious supplies of ammunition, there is nothing to hinder the Russian occupation of Przemyśl after a comparatively short bombardment. Even if the Russians get no farther this fall, they have done splendid work and should have no difficulty in holding their new positions throughout next winter. On the other hand, there is a big possibility that they may go much further and may bring Austria completely to her knees within the next two months.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The Germans have executed a British skipper on a charge of turning his vessel, the Brussels, against a German submarine. Berlin will no doubt hail this as another "naval victory."

Seventy thousand Turks are on the plains of Hungary. If reports emanating from Hungary are authentic, they would be infinitely more comfortable in Constantinople, which is no rose garden at that.

Get the health habit by eating Shredded Wheat Biscuit, the ideal hot-weather food, which contains more digestible, brain-making, muscle-building material than beefsteak or eggs. The tasty, delicious crispness of the baked wheat gives palate joy and stomach comfort. It supplies the maximum of nutriment in smallest bulk, and its daily use keeps the bowels healthy and active. Sir George Foster made an eloquent speech in London the other day. Borden's ministers seem to shine more brilliantly in the London atmosphere than they do in Ottawa.

TENNIS DANCE

The Tennis Club gave a delightful little dance from 9 until 12 on Saturday night in the Catholic Hall, when about one hundred young folks had a jolly time. The hall was tastefully decorated and the music was furnished by the Majestic orchestra. The original intention was to hold the dance at the tennis court but the weather willed otherwise.

"SCANDAL" SHOWING AT WESTHOLME THEATRE

"Scandal," the five-act drama at the Westholme tonight and tomorrow, is the first picture of its kind to be shown in Prince Rupert. It is an intensely dramatic picture which teaches a lesson. Mr. and Mrs. Smalley play the leading parts and their work is great. Mr. Wright, a business man, takes his stenographer, who has sprained her ankle, home in his car. Neighbors' tongues get wagging and the trouble is on. Gossip leads to divorce and no end of complications, culminating in shooting. "Scandal" has created a sensation wherever shown and the Westholme management, who have run the picture over, say that it is great. There are also two good comedies and special music. Mr. Harvey playing "Humoresque" by request.
