THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION

How great a debt civilization owes to the Russian Duma (says the "Times") and those who supported its victorious struggles with the dark forces that dominated the court, the record, illumined by recent events, vividly reveals. The outside world knows now—that it little imagined before—that the issue of the war was really bound up in Russia's struggle for self-government, that upon the decision of that epochal internal conflict depended actually the life of the anti-German coalition. Had the reactionaries won there would have been a separate peace, and more than two million Teutonic troops with their equipment would have been released for service on the western, Italian and Balkan fronts. The Turkish forces in Armenia—the bulk of the Ottoman army—would have been available for use on the Mesopotamia and Syrian fronts. Germany would have been able to launch new operations involving Holland, Denmark and Switzerland, while, more important than all, she would have had in Russia a base of supplies which would have made her independent of overseas communications.

The difficulty in the way of the plot, however, was the army which with its leaders was wholeheartedly loyal. The Grand Duke Nicholas, Alexieff, Brusiloff, Baratoff and Ruzsky supported the Duma. How to overcome that obstacle was the problem Sturmer & Company set out to solve. Their solution was simple. It was to hamper the army, to disorganize its transport, cut off its supplies—in a nutshell to facilitate its speedy destruction by the outside enemy. Protopopoff was to augment this plan by spreading discontent among the people and causing workmen's strikes. If necessary it was decided to inaugurate a specially-controlled revolution with which to cap the climax. All these measures were carried out. The transportation system was disorganized when winter set in. German prisoners were deliberately sent to Archangel to explode munition depots. Starvation threatened the people of Petrograd, Moscow and other large cities. Alexieff, Russia's greatest strategist, and a friend of the Duma, was dismissed. The stage was set for Russia's humiliating defeat at arms which was to be the excuse for making a separate peace.

But the Duma was alive to the conspiracy. In November Mr. Miliukoff delivered a terrific arraignment of Sturmer and his group, exposing all the details of the conspiracy. The censor forbade the publication of the speech in the Russian press, but thousands of copies were surreptitiously printed and circulated all over the country. The Duma was then prorogued, but it had done its work. Russia was aroused. Even the nest of traitors did not dare to touch Miliukoff or dissolve the Duma, although they delayed the resumption of proceedings until February. When the Duma met, its leaders tried to wean the Czar from the traitorous influences which surrounded him, but failed, one of the reasons for the failure being the fact that the chief of those influences was his German wife. There was no other way to save Russia, therefore, than by proclaiming a Provisional Government and calling upon the people to revolt.

It was a narrow escape for the Entente, the narrowest escape it has had in this whole war. From first to last these agents of pan-Germanism had been playing the Kaiser's game. The Roumanian debacle followed the meeting between Protopopoff and Warburg at Stockholm. When we consider the terrible handicap under which they have struggled we are able to appraise at something like its real value the magnificent devotion and heroism of the Russian army and the unparalleled skill of its leaders. Betrayed and hampered at every turn, its plans conveyed to the enemy, its supplies cut off and its transport systematically interrupted it has fought under difficulties such as no other army in this and perhaps any other war has had to surmount. The Duma, the Russian army and the Russian people at last have come into their own.

The High Cost of Indigestible Food falls heavily upon the household where there is no intelligent direction of the food supply. Expensive high proteid foods, such as beef and pork, impose a heavy burden upon the liver and kidneys. They are not as nutritious as cereals and fruits. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with milk supply all the nutriment needed for a half day's work at a cost of only four or five cents. Cut out meat and eggs, eat Shredded Wheat Biscuit with green vegetables and fruits, and see how much better you feel. For breakfast with hot milk or cream. Made in Canada.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The refusal of the Dutch government to permit armed merchantmen to enter the ports of Holland will not, as some correspondents think, be the cause of reprisals by the British. With the fate of Belgium close under her eyes, Holland may be excused for seeking to avoid any excuse for invasion of her territory by the Germans.

History is being made in London these days. The Imperial conference is in session, and for the first time representatives of the overseas Dominions are in consultation with the British War Council on the military plans of the Empire.

It affords another example of the way in which our institutions broaden slowly down from precedent to precedent.

The public are asked to remember the sale by the school girls on the 31st inst., in the Borden Street School from 3 till 6 p.m. There will be many Easter novelties for sale. Afternoon tea will be served and an orchestra will discourse sweet music.
