POWER IS VITAL part of the $550,000,000 aluminum key being cast near a wilderness treasure chest in British Columbia. Blasting crews are working on the Kenney Dam to straddle the Grand Canyon of the Nechako River. This will reverse the flow of a watershed of 5,400 square miles to provide power for the smelter at Kitimat, 125 miles westward, of the Aluminum Company of Canada. The development, 450 miles north of Vancouver, also will unlock an area rich in natural resources which have given B.C. her lifeblood so far—timber, minerals and fish. (CP PHOTO)

IN WILDERNESS of trees, lakes and mountains architects have drawn up blueprints for a "model city" and everything planned in minute detail for a population of 46,500. It is the townsite of Kitimat, heart of a $550,000,000 aluminum industry under construction by the Aluminum Company of Canada. Kitimat, expected to have a population of 7,500 at the start of aluminum production in 1954, will be a seaport and a railway terminus as well as a smelter site. (CP PHOTO)

Trees were uprooted, highways blocked, and power and telephone lines levelled in the path of the twister, a mile wide and five miles long. This pile of splintered wood was formerly the barn of Morton Wickwire. (CP PHOTO)

$55,000,000 PROJECT—The Aluminum Company of Canada is building what it calls the biggest aluminum smelter in the world at Kitimat, B.C., 450 miles north of Vancouver and 80 miles southeast of Prince Rupert. The smelter will be the payoff part of a $550,000,000 project started following a survey made in 1948. It is expected to be in operation in mid-1954 producing 88,000 short tons of aluminum annually. A 300-foot high dam on the Nechako river will reverse the normal eastward flow of the water of a huge plateau, creating a natural reservoir 350 square miles in area. Water will be drawn off to the west by way of a 10-mile tunnel through solid rock to the power site 125 miles west of the dam. Transmission lines will carry the output, up to 1,600,000 horsepower, to the smelter 50 miles further northwest. (CP PHOTO)

LOG BOOMS are again a common sight in the bays of the Queen Charlotte Islands following return to work of 32,000 woodworkers who were on strike for more than a month and a half.

SPORTS ROUND-UP

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK—The past few days have produced a rash of letters to Rogers Hornsby and his friends of the press. They urge the new Cincinnati manager to mend his ways because it is too late and try to beget of house mother to the five athletes he has been in command.

Each communication reared the grizzled old battering that this might well prove to be a go-round if he refuses to comply with his new charges eventually gets the old re-ho because he has wounded some young and highly-paid players. This is a new era, they say, and the modulator's first duty is to pat his heels when they do something at all, the boys might as well wear and tear on their writers. Hornsby will continue to be Hornsby, the one and only Hornsby, and Gabe Paul, smart young boss of the team, knew it when he signed that must be the Hornsby wanted. If not, then someone made an expensive mistake the same as Bill Vecek of St. Louis Browns did.

Each individual Cincinnati player either will admire Hornsby's methods and be glad to give him everything he got, or they won't. And nothing anybody can do about it. It is not in Hornsby's power to alter the thoughts of time and start handing out tips for special effort.

in the evening. It is his honest belief that the luckiest man alive is a big league ball player, and that his semi-monthly paycheque is all the reward he needs or deserves for bearing down every minute.

Some of the Brownies, one learned very early in the season, felt frustrated because their leader did not necessarily ask about their health and breakfast, and because he ate them out for dull play while failing to applaud their better efforts.

"I don't care whether they like me or not," Hornsby remarked upon one occasion, "just so they play ball for me. They're supposed to be grown men."

Not all the Brownies felt hurt at the Rajah's reserve. At least two, catcher Clint Courtney and outfielder Jim Rivera, who had played for Hornsby in the minors, considered him a great man, and likely they still do. Neither of them, we have heard, would have anything to do with the sad incident in Boston when the players presented Vecek a cup for having "liberated" them from Hornsby's clutches.

It is a coincidence, perhaps, that both are tough, fighting ball players who make up in hustle what they may lack in natural gifts. It might be no coincidence that Rivera was traded to the White Sox the other day in a one-sided deal which quite likely will bring a revision of the game's waiver rule.

The Reds, having played under a succession of easy-going pilots, will find the Rajah strong medicine for a time. The thing to do, kiddies, is gulp it down quickly, and then you'll find you have quite a manager, quite a manager.

Millers Edge Firemen In Most Hectic Night Game

Millers edged past Firemen 5-4 last night in one of the season's most spectacular games on the softball diamond. CCC 300 scored four unearned runs in the last two innings for and they needed to win. In the ninth inning, the Firemen rallied to score runs on four hits and five strikeouts by Danny Bill's loaded triple.

In two runs in the last of the ninth (last inning), the two pulp millers at bat went out. Then Wagner reached on an error and went on a wild pitch. William walked, McDade singled, and Wagner.

Bill hit a ground ball to stop, reaching first on a bad throw, Williamson scoring and tying the ball game.

Deary followed with a drive to short which was fumbled and Lepage came home with the winning run.

Deary was credited with the win. He struck out 11 and walked three. His strikeout total was one short of the league high of 12 set by Don Scherk and Rusty Ford, but was the highest for a seven inning affair. Ralph Enridge of the Smokies was charged with the loss.

McDade of CCC was the big hitter with four out of five and five RBI's. For Firemen, Bill, Webster and Currie each collected three hits, Bill with two triples.

Tomorrow night, league leading Number Ones meet cellar-dwelling Hawks.
