Housework Isn't Fun Even If Mates Help; Matrons Prefer Jobs

By ADELAIDE KERR

NEW YORK (AP)—Out of 100 wives in two big New York housing developments, more than one-fourth like nothing at all about housework; more than half hold jobs, and the husbands of 63 per cent help with the housework.

The women also disclosed in a survey that the husbands of about four-fifths do not get a regular night out; that one-half think their education failed to prepare them adequately for careers or home-making and that, contrary to one of the most cherished male beliefs, 84 per cent do not want to be a man.

The survey was conducted by Town and Village, a weekly newspaper covering Stuyvesant town and Peter Cooper village, huge post-war housing developments on East Side Manhattan.

HIGH INCOMES

Forty-four per cent of the women who participated are in the $5,000-$10,000 income bracket and all have incomes of $3,000 or above. The average age of the women is 34 and the average number of children in their families is .88.

Twenty-six per cent reported they only partially enjoy motherhood. Five and a half per cent said they do not enjoy it. The remainder said that they definitely do.

Of the 52 per cent who hold jobs, 29 per cent work because they like it, not because of economic necessity. The rest reported they work partly because it is necessary and partly because they wanted to.

Sixty-three per cent have a regular family budget and stick to it. More than half save regularly.

SHARE INTERESTS

Of the 69 per cent who hold college degrees, 91 per cent are married to college graduates.

Discussing home life, 80 per cent said they shared regular interests with their husbands; 37 per cent said they had no differences with their husbands, 21 per cent differed over relatives, 17 per cent over "rebellious attitudes," 10 per cent over disciplining the children, nine per cent over sex.

Sixty-eight per cent said they took active pleasure in sex; 21 per cent reported only passive enjoyment.

LONDON (CP)—Asked his occupation, a 63-year-old man in court here said " Ihave done no work for two years because I am too old." The judge replied: "Good Heavens. A man of 63 is not old nowadays."

Mr. Champion Winces As He Sees Muzzy Set

If Mr. Abel passed his partner's double after the one spade bid, Mr. Champion thought it might be pretty bad. He therefore bid two clubs. A few seconds later Mr. Muzzy was in FOUR spades. Mr. Champion shuddered but felt a little better when nobody doubled.

Mrs. Keen opened the king of hearts and Mr. Muzzy won with the ace and promptly ruffed a heart with dummy's lone trump. Checking up (too late as usual) he saw that he still had two heart losers and a diamond loser.

If he let the defenders in now, they would surely cash those tricks, so he tried to get rid of one of them on dummy's clubs.

It is hard to see how he expected to do this as he had two clubs himself and, with only five clubs outstanding, one opponent had a doubleton at the most. Anyway, at trick three Mr. Muzzy led the ace of clubs. He followed with the king and Mrs. Keen ruffed and cashed two quick hearts and the ace of diamonds. She still had the ace of trumps for the setting trick.

Mr. Champion hit the ceiling. "Muzzy, why do you always have to win the FIRST trick?" he snarled. "All you had to do was win 10 tricks. Any 10. You can give up the first three or the last three or any three in between as long as it's not more than three."

"I can't make the hand," replied Mr. Muzzy excitedly, "with only one trump in your hand."

"Want to bet?" continued Mr. Champion. "With a club suit like I had, you don't need trumps, too. All you have to do is give them the first heart trick. Then there's nothing they can lead that will beat you."

Mr. Champion was right. If Mrs. Keen wins the first trick, her best continuation is another heart. But this can be trumped on the board and a diamond led. Mrs. Keen would win with the ace and fire a third heart.

But Mr. Muzzy could win the ace, enter dummy with a club, pitch his last heart on the queen of diamonds, and reenter his hand by ruffing a diamond. He could then drive out the ace of trumps and just barely outlast Mrs. Keen in the trump department to rack up 10 tricks.
