33 DAYS IN RUSSIA AS CANADIAN LABOR ENVOY

Moscovites 'Happy, Contented' Union Delegate Tells Meeting

People in Moscow are not contented, John Hines, trade union delegate, told more than 100 delegates to the Common Labour Centre last night.

Hines, a 33-year-old member of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Decorators and Painters of America (AFL), who spent 33 days in the Soviet Union, eight of which he spent in Moscow.

"You enter Moscow and you find no evidence of any war or want. First introduction had to the city with its buildings was a visit to the electrical plant. A 24-year-old woman doctor in charge of the polyclinic where there were 25 doctors and nurses and a 25-bed hospital at the plant. Everyone had at least once a year check-up.

Doctors are operated for rather than cure. The patient, who leaves today, where he will speak at a public meeting, said the Soviet Union does not need or want other currency than its own, and for that reason does not cater to tourists.

"Russia is so self-sufficient that she does not want tourists, nor is their accommodation at the present time to take care of them."

Explaining that he and six other Canadian trade unionists were guests of the Russian trade union movement, Mr. Hines said the strictest regulation for anyone entering the country concerns money.

"You must declare the amount of money on your person when entering Russia and on leaving."

He told how a 19-year-old boy working in a Russian factory made 800 rubles a month and explained that because "the Soviet Union does not want our money, it is difficult to compare the value of a ruble against the Canadian dollar on a monetary basis."

He said, however, that 800 rubles would be "about equal to $250 a month here."

"But rents would range only between four and seven per cent as against our high rent, and his living costs would be much cheaper than ours because there are no hidden taxes on meals, cigarettes and other articles."

"The only tax is on income and that is on a sliding scale."

Mr. Hines said construction of huge apartment blocks is gradually replacing old homes in and around Moscow. The apartments, in many cases, are built behind rows of old homes which are torn down and the streets then widened.

"That's the main reason for such wide streets in Moscow."

SET WAGES

Wages for men and women are the same for identical jobs, he told the meeting, and said "the scale is set by the trade union movement." Salaries for doctors and other professional persons are established by the ministries of the government.

Mr. Hines said he saw no unemployment and while the hotels in Moscow and other cities are "very busy, it is not from tourists. There is a great deal of travel within the country without letting tourists come in."

Explaining that working women can take their children to nurseries and kindergartens built near factories, he said "there are equal opportunities for women who take a practical part in the trade unions."

He said "annual vacations vary from 12 to 48 days according to the nature of the occupation."

One of the few persons to visit Russia since the war, Mr. Hines left Vancouver last Aug. 4.

Asked how he was selected as the B.C. delegate, he said "my name just happened to be the one chosen."

Trade unionists in the Soviet Union had invited Canadian unionists, through the Canadian-Soviet Friendship Society, to visit Russia. The society in Vancouver asked the unions to set up a sponsoring committee which selected several names.

Mr. Hines moved to Canada from his home in England at the age of two. He was back for

New Powers Sought In Throne Speech

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian Government announced it will allow private companies to enter the field of television, now occupied solely by the publicly-owned Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The government also announced it will seek the renewal of its peace-time emergency powers, first granted by Parliament following the outbreak of war in Korea.

An associated minister of national defence will be appointed.

The announcement was contained in a 2,000-word speech from the Throne, read at the opening of the Seventh session of Canada's 21st Parliament.

The session may be the last before a general election, expected in the Fall of 1953.

The speech, read by Governor-General Massey, said Parliament will be asked to vote money to enable the CBC to establish television stations in Halifax, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Applications will be considered for private TV stations in cities where the CBC has no television outlets or immediate plans for a station.

The speech said resistance of United Nations forces in Korea and increasing strength of the forces of freedom in Europe have lessened the dangers of war.

Ralph O. Campney, appointed solicitor-general a few weeks ago, is being mentioned as likely choice for the new post of associate defence minister.

The speech said income tax regulations dealing with deferred depreciation on property will be eased; plans being made for the development of the St. Lawrence seaway and power project and navigation improvements on the Pacific Coast will be studied.

The national health grants program will be extended; provision will be made for greater educational aid for children of fathers who died as a result of war service, and amendments to the National Housing Act are planned but details were not disclosed.

New Applications Must Be Made by Home-Seekers First House Ready for January

Appointment of a housing authority to administer the 50 rental homes being built here by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation was announced today with Orme G. Stuart named chairman for a three-year term.

Other members, all of whom received a certified copy of an order-in-council from the provincial secretary's office at Victoria, naming them are: Norman Bellis and Mrs. M. Willa Ray, who will hold office until December 31, 1954; Robert G. Moore and Hugh A. MacKenzie, who will hold office until Dec. 31, 1953.

Known as the Prince Rupert Housing Authority, first body of its kind appointed in B.C., they will select a secretary-manager who will supervise the general operation.

Allotting of the houses to qualified applicants "will not be done on a first come, first served basis, but on a fair assessment of all the facts concerning the case," said Mr. Stuart, adding that first of the new units is not expected to be available for occupancy until early in January and "rents will run from $70 to $90 a month."

Members of the authority will serve without remuneration and will be guided in their activities under the joint agreement between the Dominion and Provincial governments and the city.

The secretary-manager will receive a salary and his duties will include assessing present accommodation of applicants.

APPLICATIONS
New application forms have been printed and are now available at the city clerk's office at the City Hall.

Mr. Stuart said persons who filled out forms last April must also fill out the new forms.

"The fact that any person completed an application form does not constitute an undertaking or obligation on the part of the Prince Rupert Housing Authority to provide that person with a house."

"Until a secretary-manager is appointed, the city is assisting in the distribution of application forms which should be completed and returned to the city clerk's office until further notice."

"It is emphasized that this arrangement is temporary, designed only to assist the Authority and save time."

"The city has no part in housing administration or allocation."
