ONTARIO LIBERALS

With some of the conclusions reached by the convention of Ontario Liberal members and candidates, says the Victoria Times, the mass of public opinion throughout the country will be in full accord. It continues:

Obviously a continuance of the present administration and its methods cannot be tolerated if Canada is to exert all her power in the war, indeed if she it not to slip backward from her present record. More than that, it must be apparent to every thoughtful citizen that weak leadership and failure to grapple resolutely with the numerous problems crying out for solution are directing the country into chaos.

But the Ontario Liberals should have been more explicit on the point of a National Government. Undoubtedly such an administration without a strong leader would not improve the situation, but that obvious fact does not mean that a combination of the best brains of the country on the basis of a broad Canadianism is not practicable or desirable. On the contrary it is both urgently desirable and practicable and has been so for three years. The Prime Minister should have tried to establish one in 1914. Party organizations of both sides might as well realize that only under such an arrangement can this country discharge the obligation which rests upon it: that out of the welter of the coming campaign must develop a Government which is neither Liberal nor Conservative, but Canadian.

With the convention's eulogy of the patriotism, integrity or purpose and statesmanship of Sir Wilfrid Laurier no fault can be found except by bitter partisans. Sir Wilfrid unquestionably is shaping his course with the desire to prevent Bourassa, Lavergne and other extremists obtaining control of the Quebec representation and setting up a Nationalist bloc which would command the balance of power in Parliament. But that is a matter which might very well be left to itself. Pursuant to his ideas Sir Wilfrid has gone on record in opposition to compulsory military service. How can the Ontario Liberals consistently endorse that attitude and at the same time proclaim themselves in favor of the full organization of the country for war, which in the very nature of things must connote conscription of man-power as well as the conscription of talent and the other resources of the country?

The Ontario Liberals would have been better advised if they had taken no organized action but instructed their candidates in the forthcoming election to run as Canadians first and party men afterwards instead of reversing the process. Their attitude with regard to the vital question of reinforcements for the battle-front is not in accord with the views of their leading newspapers, The Globe and The Star, which are calling for the enforcement of compulsory military service without delay. The call of the trenches must be answered, no matter who is in power. Voluntaryism will not supply the need and the sooner everybody realizes that the better. Suppose these self-constituted voices of Ontario Liberalism had their way and trial was made and failed, as fail it would—what would they advocate?

It will be the duty of the Western Liberals to convince their Ontario colleagues that they cannot dictate the attitude of the Liberals of Canada west of the Great Lakes. They stand for the immediate adoption of compulsory military service together with the full mobilization of the country for war in straight action, not with words and modifications. They stand for a readjustment of the domestic policies of the country on radical lines and in a way best suited to their interests, not exclusively on behalf of these interests East of the Great Lakes which have dominated those policies so long, centralizing there the entire railroad, industrial, financial and political power of the country. The Western Liberals have it in their hands to force the development of a National Government out of the approaching election, no matter who is returned. This should be their aim, and they will be acting the part of big, broad Canadianism if they exercise their influence to that end.

The Real "War Bread" must contain the entire wheat grain—not the white flour center—but every particle of gluten and mineral salts—also the outer bran coat that is so useful in keeping the bowels healthy and active. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is the real "war bread" because it is 100 per cent. whole wheat prepared in a digestible form. Contains no yeast, baking powder, seasoning, or chemicals of any kind. Food conservation begins with Shredded Wheat Biscuit for breakfast and ends with Shredded Wheat Biscuit for supper. Delicious with sliced bananas, berries, or other fruits. Made in Canada.

KILTS MAKE A HIT

Chicago, July 27.—Kilts and tartans captured the heart of Chicago today when two hundred of the 48th Canadian Highlanders headed by pipers and the regimental brass band paraded the downtown streets as a preliminary to a week of intensive recruiting for the British army as well as for the United States army.

The Canadians, the first detachment of British military to actually march under arms on American territory since the evacuation of New Orleans, 1815, were greeted with cheers all along the line of march.
