BRITISH WOMEN ARMY NEAR THE FIRING LINE

British Headquarters in France July 30.—The feminine section of the British army is growing larger day by day. Khaki-clad young women, at first confined to the Red Cross section of the field army, are rapidly pushing into many departments of army activity, displacing men, who in turn are passed along to work nearer the front-line trenches.

Every boat coming from England brings new companies of women workers. At first their work was mostly at the remote bases, but now they may be found working farther and farther afield, sometimes, indeed, within hearing distance of the guns. In the clerical departments at the chief bases women have very largely displaced men. As chauffeurs they are being employed by hundreds, not only on ambulances and light supply waggons, but also on heavy transport lorries, and with entire success.

Build Army Huts.

Six hundred young women carpenters are at work building army huts. They have only six weeks of instruction and preparation in England before crossing the Channel. Their work here is practically "shop work." The huts are of the new semi-cylindrical Canadian type, which is being turned out by the thousand in knock-down form, every hut being exactly alike. The young women wear a neat uniform of regulation khaki, with short skirt and knickers, and a sleeve badge showing an army half completed. Each girl has to know only one small part of the whole process of hut-building; each day she repeats the same operation, whether it be with saw, hammer or plane, and then passes on the work to the next operative.

The housing of the women workers has been accomplished without particular difficulty. Some units are in huts, others billeted in hotels. Each unit has its own supervisory officer and chaperons. While at work it is under the command of young women Lieutenants, who act their part as smartly as any British subaltern with the actual fighting forces.

Mr. C. A. G. Armstrong has handed in to the society $18.70, the proceeds of the launch fares at the Presbyterian Church picnic which is acknowledged with thanks.

At last Friday's sale, the donors and the winners of the raffles are as follows: Mr. J. C. Gavagan gave a box of fruit which was won by Mr. H. F. McLeod; C. H. Orme, a bathing cap won by Mr. E. F. Doyle; M. H. Craig, an Indian basket won by Mr. P. W. Anderson; Parkin, Ward Co., a flashlight, won by J. B. Roerig; Mr. Fred Stork a bake pan won by Mr. Cutt; Mr. McCaffery a sack of sugar won by E. Only 20 donations of food were received at last Friday's sale, as against 70 three months ago. Through these sales great help is being sent to the front, and it is hoped that as long as the men are fighting and being wounded for us, they will not be forgotten. Besides this, many regular customers have to go away disappointed, which in time might affect these sales.
