HOME TO ROOST

With regard to the position of affairs in Canada today, and especially having the situation of Nationalist Quebec in mind, their objection to the conscription proposals of the Borden Government, and the Premier's reading of the Nationalists out of his party in the House of Commons the other day, the Toronto Globe in a recent issue points out how this unfortunate position of affairs, as brought about by the Nationalists in Quebec, is the outcome of the action of the Premier and his colleagues taken six years ago.

"The mills of the gods grind slowly" but their wheels never cease. How small they grind in the politics of Canada, the Globe says, "was illustrated in the House of Commons when Sir Robert read a skillfully worded declaration denying that there is now some connection or collusion, and that my supporters and friends are, in fact, encouraging the Nationalist party in the course which they are adopting."

Here are the very words of his denial:

"I desire to make most emphatic, unreserved and comprehensive denial of this statement. There is not and never will be any connection or collusion whatever between my friends and supporters and those of the Nationalist party of Quebec."

The man who wrote that "denial" may be an artist with words. The Prime Minister, his colleagues, and his supporters may be beguiled by its cleverness. But does he, do they, or does any intelligent person imagine, for one silly moment, that this studied manipulation of the tenses of verbs in 1917 can blot out or obscure the ugly truth of immutable facts that date back to 1911? Of course he can now stand up in Parliament and deny that "there is now" that "is now" is of the very essence of his denial. Of course he can swear, by all the gods at once, that "there is not and never will be"—that cautious "is not and never will be" is the whole scope and compass of his loud-spoken but utterly compromising declaration.

"Now," forsooth! What difference can denial "now" make, when the damage to Canada's unity, to Canada's integrity, to Canada's loyalty was done by Bourassa and the Nationalists in 1911?

It is quite proper, quite becoming, and altogether fitting that the Prime Minister of Canada should "now" say:

"I regard the attitude of the Nationalist party of Quebec in this war as unpatriotic, and I consider that it is the first duty of myself and my friends to assist in defeating that party;" but that attitude is no more "unpatriotic" today than it was in 1911, when it was recognized by Mr. Borden in its campaign of anti-British Nationalism, or when it was rewarded by him with choice Cabinet portfolios for Bourassa's nominees. They say nothing now that they did not say then, and said repeatedly, with great plainness of speech, and in Borden's very presence. The "Nationalist party," against whom he now declaims, would never have had national significance, or national power for harm, or national opportunity for the weakness and disgrace and peril to the Canadian nation, had Premier Borden not, openly and deliberately denied his "duty" as leader of the Conservative party in Canada, and flagrantly and recklessly betrayed his trust as Prime Minister in a British Dominion.

The Globe says today what it said in 1911, scores of times in front-page prominence with editorial emphasis. The campaign was a Bourassa-Borden cabal. It was a Bourassa-Lavergne undertaking. It was a Nationalist-Tory triumph. The profits of that whole disloyal adventure went to Borden's political advantage. They helped to make him premier. They secured for him whatever of party power was in the early years of his Premiership. His repudiation of the Nationalist party "now" does not wipe out, either for him, or for his associates, or for the Canadian people, the piled-up humiliation, discord and peril which now menace the nation.

There is no use blinking the

"The Poor Man's Potato" has become the rich man's luxury. Whether at three dollars a bushel, or twenty-five cents a bushel, potatoes are not a complete food. Two or three Shredded Wheat Biscuits with milk furnish more real, body-building nutriment than a meal of potatoes or meat, are much more easily digested and cost much less. Shredded Wheat is 100 per cent. whole wheat, nothing added and nothing taken away—gives mental vim and physical vigor for the hot days. Delicious for breakfast, or any meal, with sliced bananas, berries or other fruits, and milk.

inevitable and inexorable retribution. The chickens of 1911 are coming home in 1917. And the end of their desperate coming is not yet. Please God this illbred and long-nursed disloyalty, which has brought such confusion and heartbreak to Canada and the Empire, may not bring civil war. But whatever comes will be the logical and inflexible outcome of what, through the past half dozen years, went before. Nemesis has been on the trail of the Prime Minister. It had to come. Here it is.

And Nemesis, while it may be slow of foot, never is fooled or dodged, and, while it may seem to be delayed, it never is put by. Here it is. What a Premier soweth that shall he also reap.

But, by the unerring reach of the organic law of national life, Canada also is involved in this retribution which Nemesis brings to the Prime Minister.
