PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

There is something farcical in the peace terms put forth at the Brest-Litovsk conference between the representatives of Russia and of Germany. The policy of no annexations and no indemnities is to be agreed upon, but before a general peace can be signed, Russia is required to obtain her allies' consent to these terms. Needless to say, the war will still go on. While the policy of no annexations and no indemnities may be suitable to Russia, it cannot be said by any means that it would be good for the other of the allies.

German East Africa and West Africa cannot be returned to the German Empire. In the first place, from the menace they would form to the more important British possessions already colonized, and in the second place, the Germans have displayed that they do not possess the genius for colonization. They do not know how to govern subject races. In Australasia, too, their possessions there already form part of the Commonwealth. Neither can Germany be allowed to retain Alsace nor Lorraine, while Japan will never permit her to go again into Kiau Chau.

It would be a fine thing, doubtless, for Germany were the Allies to agree to no annexations and no indemnities. She would then be better off than the Allies after the war. And what about Belgium? There is where is required a greater indemnity than all Germany could ever pay, for the damage and destruction, sorrow and affliction which she has caused to that unhappy nation. Great Britain fought all Europe to a standstill in previous centuries for what she considered to be right, and the people of the British Empire are prepared to do the same thing again if need be, together with their brethren in the United States, so that the accused thing called war may never again afflict humanity.

This can only be done by the placing of Germany and her war-mad emperor in such a position that she will never again be able to start anything. What the Allies have to do is to "win the war" as soon as possible. With a German peace the Allies would lose the war. The Allies must make the peace terms and Germany must accept them. Belgium demands indemnities. She has need of them. France demands indemnities for the damage the Germans have caused to that fair land. When the Kaiser asks for peace terms, the war might end.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The Fraser Valley and the lower coast cities have been having a slight taste of what is more common up here. To have the telegraph wires down and the train service interrupted is no longer a novelty, now.

Now that the City Council have served nearly their full term, public interest in municipal matters is becoming more marked. Slamming the men whom the people themselves elected is the favorite pastime. If the electors don't like their council, let them kick themselves. They did the electing.

Observers at Washington are convinced that the process of nationalization of public utilities will not stop with the railroads. On the contrary, they think that it has only just begun, and that before long, the Government will take over the telegraphs and the express services, not already part of the railroad systems. And the nationalization of utilities will not stop there, either.

One of the leading naval experts in Germany, Captain Persius, admits that the U-boats are not starving Great Britain. He now thinks that the submarines have some considerable task to perform, and that no sensible man will put a time limit upon their doings. The Germans are like the Missourians—they have to be shown. And they will only believe they cannot win the war when their boasted military organization is thrown pell mell across the Rhine.

For 122 years, the British sol-must contain the entire wheat grain—not the white flour center—but every particle of gluten and mineral salts—also the outer bran coat that is so useful in keeping the bowels healthy and active. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is the real "war bread" because it is 100 per cent. whole wheat prepared in a digestible form. Contains no yeast, baking powder, seasoning, or chemicals of any kind. Food conservation begins with Shredded Wheat Biscuit for breakfast and ends with Shredded Wheat Biscuit for supper. Delicious with sliced bananas, berries, or other fruits.

dier was valued at one shilling per day, and in 1795 one shilling was worth much more than in 1917. To die for his country is the highest service that any man can render to the state, and as such, should be worth the highest reward. Even in Canada, an alleged democratic country, the soldier is only worth $1.10. Even politicians get more than that.

CHINESE TERRITORY OCCUPIED BY JAPAN

Shanghai, Jan. 2.—The establishment by the Japanese of a civil administration in Shantung territory, outside of the Tsing Tao area, captured by the Japanese from the Germans early in the war, is attracting widespread attention. This action by Japan, thus replacing the military regime with a civil administration was the subject of a protest lodged recently at Tokio by China.
