SHIPBUILDING

Once more the people of Prince Rupert have a ray of hope with regard to the ship-building capabilities of the port, which have been so sorely neglected since the war began. The Union Government has decided to utilize to full capacity "all existing shipyards in Canada" in the production of modern steel cargo steamers. The Minister of Marine is also arranging for the establishment of steel rolling mills for the production of ship plates.

Once upon a time, Sir Joseph Flavelle intimated that if a supply of steel plates could be secured, he, as chairman of the Munitions Board, would place contracts for ships with Prince Rupert. He knew all the time, of course, that at that particular moment, there were no steel plates in sight on this continent. That was only his little way of trying to make the Prince Rupert people think that he was a good fellow.

If Canada is to be placed upon a war basis, and all the resources of the Dominion employed, Prince Rupert's plant, no matter who it belongs to, must be included among these resources, and it is up to the government to see that these resources are employed. It has been said, and truly, that the plant here could have done more for the winning of the war, had it been employed to its capacity during the last three years, than the 100,000 men about to be conscripted.

It may be that the new minister will have a different idea of the utilization of the resources of the Dominion than had the Munitions Board, when they were awarding contracts. He has been asked to investigate into the conditions here, and his reply will be awaited with interest.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

It's no wonder that the prairie people come to the coast in increasing numbers year by year for the winter.

British patrols have forced the passage of the Piave river, and British and French artillery are hammering the Austro-Germans in Northern Italy. The Huns may be sorry yet that their lines of communication are so long.

Ottawa is said to be busy this week. More Liberal legislation coming.

Even with four candidates in the field for the mayoralty, there are still more expected to come forward before nomination day. Prince Rupert never had before such a choice.

Negotiations for the accomplishment of their ideal having broken down, the Bolshevik government in Russia are now preparing to fight for it. "Our strength lies in our weakness," says one of the delegates. But physical weakness will hardly beat the Germans. "Trust in God," said Cromwell at the battle of Dunbar, "but keep your powder dry." Moral strength, without the force to back it, is not enough in itself, when dealing with the Kaiser.

But on the other hand, if the idealists among the Russians—and the Russian is an idealist, and there are many of them—are able to infect the materialist German mind with their contagious enthusiasm for democracy and for the rights of the individual and of peoples in the working out of their own salvation, instead of having it done for them by the bureaucrats, then indeed their trials and tribulations will not have been in vain. If as reports have it, the German soldiers on the Russian front have revolted from the authority of the Kaiser, owing to the propaganda of the Russian Bolsheviks spread during their periods of fraternizing, then the Bolsheviks have struck one of the shrewdest blows at Kaiser Wilhelm yet.

"THE CHARMER" AT THE WESTHOLME TONIGHT

A little girl's faith in fairies, although this is not a fairy story, serves as the basis of the plot in the wonderful Blue Bird photoplay "The Charmer," to be screened at the Westholme Theatre tonight. The remarkable things the little girl accomplishes is a tribute to childish faith and sincerity of purpose. Brilliant in its photoplay, the smoothly-running story progresses to the happiest of endings with the little girl coming into her just reward.

One of the scenes in this play will be specially appreciated by men who recall "the ole swimmin' hole" and the "fearful joys" of playing hooky. The mean boy does his worst with the simple adornments of boyhood left scattered in abandon on the bank, and the result will carry the old boys back to their youth, and the scene will be extremely realistic to the kiddies. And then there's the monkey! But you must see this play for yourself. The young ones will be delighted with it. The gazette is also very fine, and the comedy is most laughable.
