Conducted as such, the problems which they present will be solved by businesslike methods. Half the trouble in this world would be avoided by going after things in the correct fashion. There is no doubt that there is enough trouble with the, state of affairs from the fishermen's point of view right now, and they intend to set it right, if human effort can. And there is no reason to believe that it cannot. One of the first things which they have to set about is the breaking up of the control which the cannerymen seem to possess over the government Fisheries Departments, both provincial and Dominion. It looks as if whatever the cannerymen say on the British Columbia coast goes. They seem to consider that they have the sole right to say what shall be done, or shall not be done with regard to salmon. And they have had things pretty much their own way, for a long time now. But the present canners have to remember that there are other people interested in the salmon fisheries as well as they. In order to conserve the catches of fish for themselves. they would that no other cannery licences be issued for the next five years, so that they who have already waxed fat in tasted either? this business might wax a little fatter. This notwithstanding the increasing demand for tory loan. They advertised. The foodstuffs all over the world. This is not business. It is simple selfishness, which is never good business.
