TOTAL DEMORALIZATION OF THE RUSSIAN ARMY

Petrograd, Jan. 28.—Major-General Bonch-Bruевич, chief-of-staff at the Russian front, paints a gloomy picture on the conditions of the Russian armies, in a report to Ensign Krylenko, the commander-in-chief. The army organizations are utterly demoralized, he says, the officers are inexperienced and the maintenance of discipline is impossible. The only possible salvation for the army, the only chance for offering an effective resistance, he declares, is for the various sections of the armies to fall back to their natural defenses and undergo a thorough reorganization of the units under trained leaders. Many parts of the western front are entirely open, General Bonch-Bruевич reports, at numerous places there being only 240 infantrymen to the mile. The reserves are refusing to relieve the men in the trenches and the soldiers are deserting in masses. Communications are broken and few horses are available. The wire entanglements have been destroyed, making resistance utterly impossible on lines as at present located even with troops. Various of the staffs must soon cease work, because of the disorder conditions and the economic life of the army will thus be ruined, he says.

The Salvation Army has been asked to locate Elinor Hanson, who is a Norwegian about 25 years of age, medium height, fair complexion. In the summer of 1914 he was known to be in Prince Rupert working, it is presumed, as a baker. Anyone knowing his present whereabouts kindly communicate with Majr Sims, Salvation Army headquarters, Winnipeg, Man.
