CANADIANS ADOPT RED-SKIN METHODS ON FLANDERS FRONT

London, February 8.—Reuter's Agency learns that the Canadians have introduced into the army a new method of carrying loads, known as the tump-line. It is based on simple principles used for generations by North American Indians. By its use one man is able to carry the ordinary load of two men for a greater distance over slippery, devastated ground and with less fatigue than a soldier can carry his own ordinary load, while it enables troops to shift pack on the march and greatly increases their marching capacity.

The tump-line, made of leather, has three component parts—the brow-band, 21 in. long by about 3 in. wide in the centre, and tapering to about one inch at each end, and two straps, each 7 or more feet long, sewn to the ends. The brow-band is passed over the head just above the brow, and the load rests high up on the back. The tump-line walks slightly bent forward, and can steady the load by holding the straps about the level of the ears. The training of the man is very simple, no previous experience being required. Tump-line companies have been formed in connection with each Canadian brigade.

TRADE PARLIAMENTS ARE INSTITUTED IN GREAT BRITAIN

London.—The National Pottery Council, which was opened last week at Hanley, is the first of the new trade organizations to bring together employers and workers to deal jointly with questions concerning the welfare and progress of their trade and its members. The Council embraces the pottery trade of the whole kingdom, and is comprised of an equal number of elected representatives of employers and workers. Dealing, as it will, with every phase of activity in the pottery industry, the Council will be the grand parliament of the trade. Conditions and wages of workers, profits and earnings of masters, the study of processes, the encouragement of research and the fullest using of results, the education of workers and encouragement of enterprise and industry, the gathering of information for the common good of the trade, the building up of trade and markets—these are some of the questions that will fall within the scope of the organization.
