MONSTROUS AND TERRIBLE.

The above are the words with which one of the German newspapers describes the coming offensive on the Western front, in its efforts to prepare the German people for further sacrifice. This is part of the campaign which the German government is conducting with in its own territories to assist the ordinary people to bear up during the hungry and heatless days, which are every day in the week now. In Germany, the newspapers are obedient. They do what they are told. But then they have to, or else be closed up. In order therefore to continue in business at all, they have to take the orders of the German government, not only as to what they shall print, but as to the manner of doing so.

Their great task now is to help the people to resist despair, and to hold on just a little longer, when their armies will return victorious, and again peace and plenty shall be the rule throughout Germany.

The German government evidently knows what it is going to be up against this time on the Western front. They know that the allies were never better prepared, and that never were their supplies of munitions, guns and men greater than at this time. Nor were they better led. The result cannot be else than the throwing back of the Germans still nearer to the Rhine, over which they will have to be driven pell-mell.

That the necessity exists for encouraging the German people is apparently evident to the Kaiser, else he would not warn the people whose destiny he controls, in such a manner, otherwise. Allegations have been made time and again, and denied time and again too, that the people of Germany were dying of mal-nutrition caused by insufficient food, and that starvation was actually stalking through that land. Whether the condition of Germany is as bad as it has been said or no, they are evidently as weary of the war, if not more so, as any of the other races.

The stimulant afforded by the German press cannot be a very strong one, because, when the individual German comes to consider the matter, if he ever does, he cannot see anything ahead. Even the testimony of the prisoners captured in France goes to show that the soldiers are themselves without hope of further victory.

Even with the assistance of the German press, the Kaiser will have a difficult job to instill confidence into either the starving people at home, or the disheartened soldiers in the trenches.

Q. C. I. WILL GIVE REVELATION IN SPRUCE LOGGING

Victoria, Feb. 27.—Armed with the authority provided by the recent Order-in-Council the Forest Branch of the Department of Land is giving every possible assistance within its power to speed up the process of spruce logging in British Columbia.

P. Z. Caverhill has already left for Prince Rupert and the Queen Charlotte Islands on behalf of the Department, where he will give the necessary supervision so far as it affects the province and make the necessary scaling arrangements. A. L. Bryant, supervisor of scalers, has been on the spot for a week or two past.

Reports reaching the Department indicate that during the next few months there will be a veritable revelation in the spruce logging industry of the province. Men and machinery are leaving for the Queen Charlottes every week in increasing quantities.

The Queen Charlotte Spruce Company—a Victoria concern—has already one camp of thirty-five men operating on a section of its limits, while it is the intention of the company to send at least another hundred men with the necessary equipment early next month, camps for whose accommodation are now in course of preparation.
