NON-COMBATANT VICTIMS.

It is to be hoped that those misguided persons who go about seeking excuses for their country's enemies, or who urge the Allies to come to terms with the Prussian Minotaur, will ponder deeply over Mr. Bonar Law's statement that 14,120 British non-combatants have been killed by German submarines and aircraft. The majority of the victims have been merchant seamen, the men to whose quiet bravery the nation owes its immunity from privation, and the Allies their ability to continue the war. The others have been mainly women and children, done to death at sea or in their own homes. Mr. Bonar Law's figures bring painfully home to us the way in which the calculated brutality of Germany has extended the scope of war's destructiveness. The number of British non-combatants killed by the Germans, huge as it is, would be but a fraction of the number of Armenians, Syrians, Arabs, Poles, Serbians, Roumanians, and Tartars who have either been massacred wholesale or have perished of cold and hunger in their flight before invading armies. Since 1914 rather more than a fourth of the population of Serbia has perished, and it has been estimated that the number of non-combatants in Europe and Asia whose untimely deaths have been directly due to the war is at least as great as the number of men who have been killed or mortally wounded in the field. These appalling facts must surely deepen the determination of every right thinking human being to stamp out the evil power of Prussia, the power whose obstinacy in devilishness has been freshly instanced by the placing of British and French officer prisoners in areas subject to risks of air raids. Peace is but an idle dream so long as an official Germany remains apparently unconscious of its sins against humanity.

THE INTERIOR EAST.

The East is a comparative term, which is much qualified.

There is the East, the near East, the far East, the middle east, and so forth, which terms are applied to certain definite areas, chiefly in the continent of Asia. And the most recent events brought about by the war are drawing attention to a part of Asia. And the most recent ever heard nowadays. And that is the region lying immediately north of India. This is ostensibly a province of China, called Eastern Turkestan, and the governor there has reported that the Turco-Germans are very active among the tribes along the border of India.

The fact of so many German prisoners being taken to Siberia during the previous campaigns of the war is now apparently being taken advantage of by the German government. They are apparently free to come and go at their own free will and imprisonment has been reduced to exile.

Berlin is now boasting that Germany now has a free way through Persia and Afghanistan to India. The capacity for self-deception bulks largely in the Teuton phrenology. But the chance of creating a diversion and of raising an insurrection among the wild tribes of these primitive regions is just the thing that would appeal to the Hun. Not that it will affect the course of the war in any way in its final outcome, but just that it would occupy so much attention of Great Britain and give her more trouble.

Conditions in this part of the world are largely as they were when the world was young. Bokhara, Samarkand, Kashgar, Kashmir—the very names of these ancient places date away back to times when western civilisation was unknown. Poets composed sonnets, theologians wrote treatises, and merchants bought and sold in these places before Rome was, but the day of their glory has departed. A forgotten part of the world, famous chiefly by imitations of their products, for a brief space it may be that the curtain of their isolation will be lifted, and the one half of the world will get a little insight into how this part of the other half lives.

NOTES FROM THE OMINECA DISTRICT

The Rocher de Boule mine is one place where real development is taking place; where results have justified expenditures and where the future is brighter than at any stage in the brilliant past. It is Rocher de Boule mountain that will provide employment for hundreds of men for many years, and this, largely because the Rocher de Boule Copper Co. has done the pioneering and achieved success.

Thos. McClymont, the mayor of Prince Rupert, is the head of a syndicate which will finance the Ashman brothers coal property. A carload of coal for Rupert is now being loaded and that will surely make the capitalists looser up and secure a full supply of the highest grade coal.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jenz, of Kispiox, on March 5.

The Glen Mountain Mining Co. with a million dollar capital has been gazetted. This company, promoted by B. R. Jones, control the Surprise group adjoining the Silver Standard near Hazelton. It is understood that operations will be started on the property this spring. (Omineca Herald.)

Early in the War the great value of WRIGLEYS was discovered by the Allied Armies. Books on the War, magazine articles and correspondence to the press, tell of its use by the allied forces—the comfort and refreshment it affords—the "pep" it inspires.
