

HOW THE GERMANS PLAN A RAID

Remarkable Thoroughness of Their Preparations Shown in Map Captured

With the American Army in France, March 13.—A plan of attack, including a map of the American positions, indicating every dugout, which was removed from the body of the Prussian Captain who led the recent assault upon the sector northwest of Toul shows how completely the Germans prepare their raids.—In fact, this was but a simple raid, not having as its ultimate object the retention of a portion of the salient.

The map goes into such detail as to show every machine gun emplacement, every trench and every depression in the ground within the American lines. At the bottom there is simply a line drawn, labelled "Our Front Line." Along this line are five shaded portions, each marked "Nest."

Four rehearsals were held for the attack, and the troops who made it were picked from new arrivals from fresh troops in the sector. They were told the Americans were in front of them.

What Prisoners Say. One prisoner, whose name is in German Lorraine, said he thought the Fatherland would lose the war if he hoped not. He knew nothing about the Americans (except that they were in the war, the German newspapers not printing anything upon the subject, he said, and being slow in reaching the front lines because of mail congestion).

This prisoner said he was convinced that the recent strikes in Germany were caused by a desire for peace, adding that all Germans wanted the war to end. He is certain that an offensive was being planned, but did not believe it would be launched before April 1st.
