FOOD SUPPLIES.

The seriousness of the situation with regard to food supplies available for the allies from now on until this summer's harvest can be reaped has not in any way decreased. There is still a shortage in the visible supplies, which are necessary to carry civilization through one of the most critical times. If it is possible for the average individual to live on less of these commodities which are the scarcest, it is up to each individual personally to see that this done. Wheat and meat are the scarcest, and whereever any ohter cereal can be sub- TURN ABOUT. stituted for wheat flour, or anything else for meat, this is one of the things which it is up to the people to do voluntarily.

So far as scarcity is concerned, there are few of the people of Western Canada at least. who have experienced this, so far. Supplies of most necessary commodities, even if higher priced, are still plenteous. We have not known here, to have to be doing with twelve and a half ounces of meat per week, yet, and while voluntary rationing is already in vogue among a great number of the people of this Dominion, it is possible that the voluntary saving of these essential foodstuffs might be largely increased. There are very many articles of food which might very well take the place of these two. wheat and meat, which are the most easily transported across the ocean, and the more foodstuffs that are substituted for these, the more of them there will be to export to where they are so badly required.

TO BOMBARD LONDON.

The real intention of the Germans with respect to their new long distance gun has now been disclosed. The shells which were thrown upon Paris from such a distance were fired VETERANS DEMAND merely as a trial for the guns.
