THE GREAT LACK

To appreciate the other man's point of view, and to understand his course of action in accordance therewith, is an accomplishment which every individual, like nations, is not endowed with. Major-General Sir Frederick Kenyon, K. C. B., the director and principal librarian of the British Museum, in a recent article, points out how this deficiency is at the root of most of the doings of the Hun which have caused the whole world to become aghast. He blames this lack upon the education which Germany has had in the past. He says:—

One of the most interesting problems which awaits the future historian is the psychology of the German from 1870 to 1914, and its results as shown in the present war. And not the least interesting chapter of this history will be that which deals with German education. German education has been held up (principally by themselves, but also by countless admirers in England and America) as a model to the world and we ask now with amazement how such supposed excellence is compatible with the results seen during the past three years.

German education, for those who wish to learn, has certain great merits. It is very thorough. It expects the student to make himself fully acquainted with the particular department of knowledge which he takes for his own. He must spare no trouble to find out all that has been written about it, and to give full references for every statement that he makes, hence, as books of reference, German works of learning are incomparable. The spade-work of the subject is done with the same zeal and thoroughness as the liberal spade-work of their entrenchments.

German intellectual work is also enterprising. Students are taught not to accept current theories but to propound new ones. Every scholar aims at making a definite contribution to knowledge, at setting up a new theory which will supercede that of a predecessor. Hence they escape the stagnation to which our own scholarship has at times been liable. With us, orthodoxy pays best; with them, heterodoxy.

The defect of German scholarship (and therefore of German education) is, to put it broadly, its want of humanity. It is a defect of imagination, of the historical sense, which ultimately means a deficiency in the sense of how human beings act and think. The path of German theology, of German history, of German literary scholarship, is strewn with the wrecks of theories which collapsed through their inherent incompatibility with the facts of human nature. These theories were often bold and stimulating. They did service to their subject by challenging inquiry; but, time after time, when the inquiry had subsided, the traditional view reappeared, corrected, it may be, and improved as the result of the research; but substantially vindicating its truth over the improbabilities of its upstart rival.

In this defect on the human side we find the answer to our question. German education is a fine machine, but its results are mechanical. The great mistakes, the great crimes which Germany has made in the present war, may be traced to this root. Before the outbreak of war they entirely miscalculated the human forces opposed to them. They made to England, as they subsequently made to America, proposals which were at once insulting and unalluring, without for a moment realizing how they would be regarded in these countries. When war broke out they embarked on a deliberate policy of terrorism, because they did not understand that terrorism intensifies hostility instead of crushing it. They have committed crimes which are blunders—the mention of Belgium, of the Lusitania, of Miss Cavell, of Ruhleben, of hospital ships sunk under a lying excuse, is a sufficient indication of what is meant—because they could not understand what other people would think of such acts. Their diplomacy was stupid, their violations of international law and of common humanity were outrageous, because they could not understand.

Nothing Like Internal Bathing for Constipation

If people only knew what internal bathing is doing for thousands of others there would be fewer Pills and Laxatives swallowed and very much less suffering from Constipation and the accompanying Stomach and Nervous troubles resulting from it.

Mrs. Cave, 841 Ellery St., Victoria, B. C., writes:—

"Before using the 'J. B. L. Cascade' I suffered constantly from Constipation, had frequent bilious attacks and sick headaches. Since beginning your system of Internal Bathing with the 'J. B. L. Cascade' four months ago, I have not had one attack and feel stronger and better in every way. My only regret is that I did not get a Cascade sooner."

By the proper application of nature's cure, warm water, by means of the 'J. B. L. Cascade' the lower intestines are kept free from all poisonous waste. Drugs force Nature. Internal Bathing assists her.

Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell of New York, a specialist on Internal Bathing, invented and perfected the 'J. B. L. Cascade,' which has done more during the past 20 years in restoring health and lessening disease than all other means combined. Ask Cyril H. Orme, druggist, cor. 3rd Ave. and 6th St., for Booklet, 'Why Man of Today is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient.' He will also be pleased to show and explain the J. B. L. Cascade to you.

BOLO PASHA MAKES REVELATIONS OF HIGH IMPORTANCE

Paris, April 12.—Revelations of the highest importance are said by LeMatin to have been made by Bolo Pasha, under sentence of death for treason, to whom a reprieve was granted yesterday. The newspaper asserts Bolo has made only a beginning of what he has to say and that another important case in connection with the German propaganda in France is about to develop.
