

A CRIPPLE FOR THREE YEARS

Helpless in Bed With Rheumatism Until He Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

MR. ALEXANDER MUNRO

R.R. No. 1, Lorne, Ont.
 "For over three years, I was confined to bed with Rheumatism. During that time, I had treatment from a number of doctors, and tried nearly everything I saw advertised to cure Rheumatism, without receiving any benefit.

Finally, I decided to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. Before I had used half a box, I noticed an improvement; the pain was not so severe, and the swelling started to go down.

I continued taking this fruit medicine, improving all the time, and now I can walk about two miles and do light chores about the place".

WHAT WOULD HAPPEN IF THE MOON STOOD STILL IN ECLIPSE?

Not a little concern has already been exhibited at the street corners over what may prove to be a really great calamity. For some months past astronomers and others have proclaimed a date upon which a great event is to take place. On June 8 next in the afternoon, when people who may chance to gaze skywards will see a strange shadow passing across the surface of Old Sol.

Wonderful precision has been evident concerning the exact moment this phenomenon will be visible to the naked eye; the precise instant the tip of the mysterious shadow will overlap the right side tip of the sun has been set down to the dot. The populace has been told that the rate of the shadow's progress will be fourteen hundred miles per hour, and that at a certain instant the ninety-five per cent. obstruction will be complete. It is said that there will be revealed again in so many minutes afterwards that bright ball which is reputed to rise in the East every morning at a given time—so stated on all up-to-date insurance almanacs.

Supposing it is Late.
 Now the matter which has caused the concern is the possibility of the partial eclipse being late in its commencement. For instance if the tip of the shadow should by any possible chance step on to the sun at 3.56, instead of 3.55 the sceptic naturally asks what consequences he may expect. But the question worrying the uninitiated is the possibility of the whole thing going wrong. If the moon suddenly revolted and on general principles refused to cross the path of its rival on the day, the question what would happen is naturally asked.

Speed May Be Lessened.
 It goes without saying that a man contemplating buying a piece of real estate would think twice about it did he possess the slightest inkling that there would be any chance of astronomical prophecy falling down in this year of grace, 1918. The thing was arranged so long ago, and since it began to push itself forward as an event of some importance war has broken out and a hundred and one things calculated to run nature a pretty close race in the following the straight and narrow, have obtruded themselves on the public gaze. The hope goes out that the times will be strictly adhered to because a wrong start—even though it may not go after 4 o'clock—would just mean a populace in a state of heady perspiration lest, say at four thirty-two and a quarter o'clock the fourteen hundred mile an hour trip should drop in speed to the city regulation.

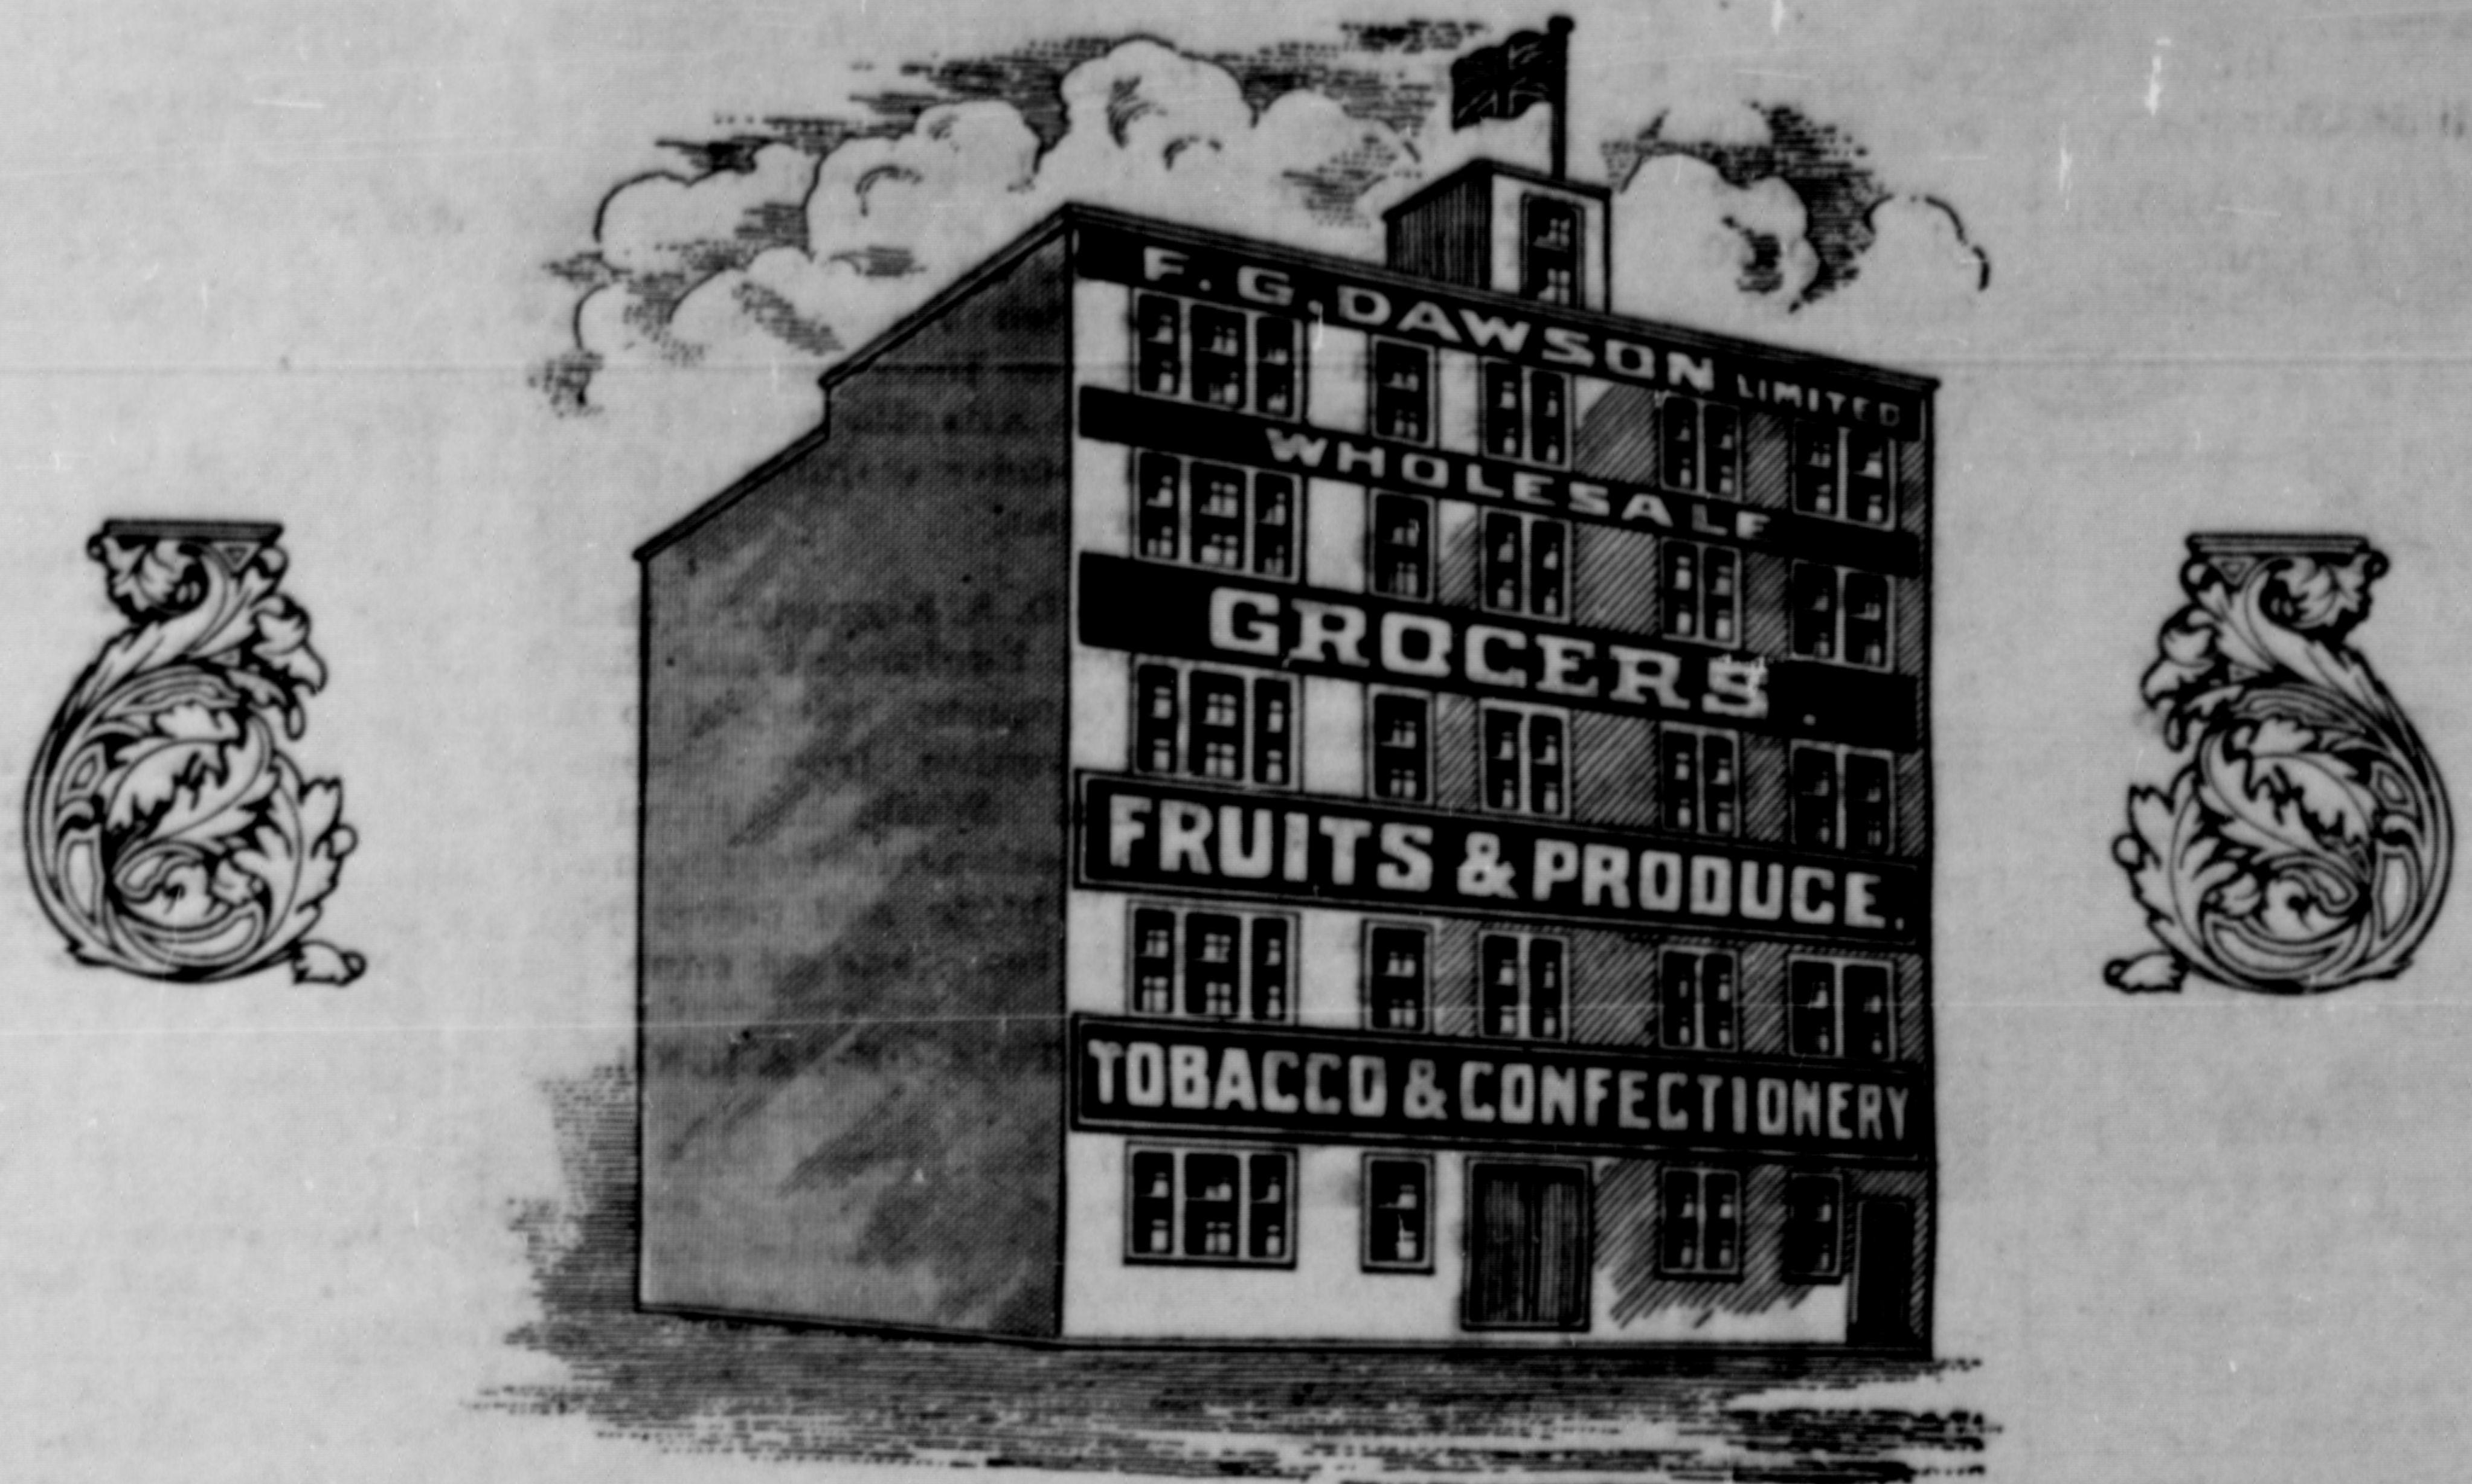

Would Foch Worry?
 Nothing could be more exasperating, however, than for the whole thing to fail to come off. That is to say, supposing that in every spot where the phenomenon will be visible it should rain in torrents and a view of the eclipse be denied to all those happy little parties over the other side of the border whose arrangements to record the event are in keeping with the preparation for a punitive raid, would the world grieve or would General Foch still continue to be optimistic over the outlook on the western front.
