Have Faith In the City.

Prince Rupert can have anything she goes after if she goes after it strong enough. Applied faith is the stuff that removes mountains. It also can build a city. This city is not only the terminus of one of the great transcontinental lines but is also the centre of an immense territory, the natural distributing point and the receiving station for the products of the north country. The minerals, the timber products and the fish will be received, while manufactured goods, food products, and particularly grain should go out across the Pacific from this point. The city is already getting the business and she will get more each year, as the country is developed and the products become known. This is the time for all to unite with a view to bringing business to the port. Optimism is not a difficult thing to learn under these conditions. If we eliminate the grouch and think and talk of progress, of health, of wealth, of power, of greatness, we shall grow and become that which we think.

Grow Raspberries, Make Money Fast.

Raspberries need moisture, rich soil, mild climate, and very little cultivation. For raspberries this is an ideal district. Look at some of the berries that are growing around the city. They are large and luscious. They look extremely tempting. There are none finer in the world.

The raspberry is sought by the jam makers just as much if not more than are strawberries and see how much easier it is to grow them, and when they are grown how easy it is to pick them. No irrigation is needed here. They simply grow and bear fruit like the trees in the Garden of Eden. There is no serpent either to drive away those who eat thereof.

The woman who goes in for raspberry growing should make a fortune. The suggestion is to women because the men are too busy just now. They have another job on their hands. The raspberry spells cash for the grower and health and pleasure to the consumer. What is the matter with the berry patch? Why is it so small?

Thrill of Pride In Local Heroes.

Prince Rupert people who read The News yesterday must have felt a thrill of pride as they read of the wonderful work of some of her citizens in France. The work of Captain Miller when he won the Military Cross with a bar is particularly worthy of notice. It was only because of the official recognition and recording of his brave work that it was possible to make it public.

Just when and where he led the attack and captured the enemy strong point, holding it all day even though under machine gun fire, we do not know. We are not sure whether it had anything to do with the big ten-day fight when at the close he found himself with less than sixty men of the Royal Irish left whereas over nine hundred had gone into battle. We do know however that he fought nobly and well and that his acts are worthy of all praise, and that his country has rewarded him with a little metal cross with an extra bar indicating that at least twice his heroic deeds have been worthy of special mention.

Of the others doubtless they did their parts just as well although the opportunity for spectacular work may not have occurred. Those of us who remain at home and enjoy the luxury of civil life just now cannot but envy the men who have had the opportunity to show the stuff of which they are made in the fight with the Huns. To be Sergeant-Major Logan, Corporal Gray or Lieut. Bert Ross would mean for any stay-at-home to be a proud man today.

Continue to Hold Supremacy in the Air.

The Allies still are supreme when it comes to air fighting. Not only that they are gaining strength relatively and every day that passes gives them the advantage. It must not be imagined that the number of machines or the speed and utility of the machines are the chief factors in securing this supremacy. Much more than a high class machine is necessary. The man that rides in it must have the metal, the resource, the alertness all of which are necessary. These qualities the British, Americans and French seem to possess more than the enemy.

Some Germans undoubtedly have done wonderful work in the air but they are rather individual cases and do not prove any rule. Taken on the whole the Allied airmen are far superior in all the qualities which make for success and that is the reason they are able to fly where they please with impunity and to protect their own lines from the German observers.

More Men to Get Out Spruce.

In order that there may be no let up in providing a proper and necessary supply of spruce for aeroplanes a great many men, including a good many expert woodsmen, are being brought into British Columbia, especially into this district. They come chiefly from New Brunswick and Quebec and some of them are returned soldiers who are unable to fight, but can provide the sinews of war for the men who are still over there. Spruce is the need of the Allies today. We are sending a good deal, so much that it is hard to realize that this is but one of the points from which the supply is going. More is needed however and it is for us to send it just as long as the fighters say it is wanted.

"The food crisis is grave and urgent, beyond possibility of exaggeration."—Sir Robert Borden

City and Town Labor Must Save The Food Situation

THE heart of the food production problem is labor, and the heart of the labor problem is the city dweller. City people must produce food if Canada is to do her full duty in support of our soldiers and Allies.

Men who are needed on farms must come from the cities and towns—there is no other source. The Provincial Departments of Agriculture co-operating with the Canada Food Board, can place thousands of men on good farms in this Province. They are needed at once.

Those who remain at home must also Grow Food

A War Garden will not excuse the man whose rightful place this year is on a farm. But War Garden service is needed from those who can do no more.

and Vacant Lot cultivation will leave the farmers free to grow more food for export.

Every pound of home-grown vegetables, produced on city land by city labor, will be a positive addition to the food supply. Home Garden

The vegetable garden offers an opportunity for service to men whose circumstances make it impossible for them to work on a farm, to women, to boys and girls—to city people generally.

Be a Food Producer This Year

If there is a garden or vacant lot movement in your community, associate yourself with it. If no organization exists, do what you can to interest your neighbours in the War Garden campaign. Write to your Provincial Department of Agriculture for pamphlets on gardening and additional information.
