A Japanese lecturer and two entertainers gave a long recital at the Empress Theatre last evening. It was a patriotic affair in which the speaker recounted incidents from the history of his country and the brave deeds which their fathers had performed. Apparently there was a good deal of humorous reference for the audience was kept amused and interested.

Advices received here from Vancouver tell of the great crowds who visited the undertaking parlors where the remains of Tommy Roberts, the well known hotel man, lay. Since he met his death by being shot, thousands of people, of high and low estate, most of whom the dead man had befriended in some way or another, have visited the remains of the deceased, which make a striking testimony of the personal popularity of Tommy Roberts.

TOMMY BURNS KNOCKS OUT TEX BRACKEN

Ex-Champion Allowed His opponent to go to the Fourth Round Before Finishing the Game.

The boxing match did not last long last night for Tex Bracken was put out of business by the ex-champion, Tommy Burns, in the middle of the fourth round. He was all in before the round started and a blow on the jaw after a certain amount of sparring sent him to the floor from which he had to be carried to his corner. The fight was short, but it gave the audience an opportunity to see what Burns was like in action. They watched a man who looked like an elephant in so far as size was concerned, but who was as nimble as a cat, alert, watchful, never missing anything and all the time having perfect command of the situation.

Too Fast to Last.

Bracken looked hard and strong but he lacked the elasticity of his opponent. He put up a good fight and during the first round was the aggressor all the time. He rushed at Burns, hitting hard and chased him all around the ring. Those who watched, however, saw that it was too fast to last. Burns took the blows with good humor, parrying most of them and clinching now and then. Apparently he did not hit back throughout the round. In the second he fell and a lady in the audience made a remark which seemed to rouse him. Then he sent in about fifteen blows in half that number of seconds and it was easy to see that the fight was over.

Punch Gone.

The Vancouver man came bravely back in the third round but his punch was gone and he evidently feared those short arm lightning blows which seemed to come when and where the aggressor wished. Once he was knocked down and the spectators feared the fun was over but at the stroke of ten he was up again and held on to the end of the round.

The fourth round was hardly a boxing match. Bracken, who had not been in training for some time, was winded and had no chance. He had the pluck, however. It was like leading a lamb to the slaughter to let him go into the ring, and when he went sprawling on the floor it was doubtful if he would come back. His backers were hopeful that he would rise before the count was over but they were disappointed. He was carried to his corner and a minute later was shaking hands with his opponent.

Preliminary Bout.

As a preliminary a local boy, Tommy Sherman, boxed a few rounds with Hugh Fox of Vancouver. Both of these boys would benefit from a few lessons from the champion. They did too much slapping and not enough straight hitting. The little chap, Sherman, handled himself the best and although he was much shorter and lighter than the other, he stood a good chance of winning out if he had been allowed to continue. Fox relied on slapping, with well advertised uppercuts now and then. On the whole this was not a very satisfactory match although it aroused a good deal of interest among the spectators.

While the boxers were putting on their gloves, Corporal Nelson made an appeal for recruits to go to Siberia.

ANOTHER OPPORTUNITY TO SEE FISHING SCENE

At the special request of a great many fishermen and others who have not yet been able to get in to see it, the management of the Westholme Theatre have arranged for another showing of the film depicting the halibut fishing out of Prince Rupert. This is a splendid picture and should not be missed by anyone.

As a climax to the holiday when everyone is tired with the rounds of pleasure, an all comedy show has been arranged. Wild Widow's Widow is the feature in five parts, and there will also be a real Christie comedy that is worth the entrance fee to witness.

One of the enjoyable events of the fairtime was the dance put on last evening in the St. Andrew's Hall by the Ladies Auxiliary of the G. W. V. A. There were about one hundred and forty couples present, and the big hall was comfortably full. There was dancing room for everyone, and the music was specially good. Miss Lillian Stephens, H. A. Harvey, and Howard White comprised the band and their ensemble was perfect. The financial returns are not yet in, but the affair is an assured success from every point of view.
