

Music Lovers Amazed by Edison's Daring Test

All told, 2,000,000 music lovers in Canada and the United States, on more than 1500 different occasions, have gone to one of their local theatres filled with curiosity regarding a startlingly novel musical recital to which they had been invited.

In each case they have come away amazed at the almost unbelievable demonstration which had taken place before their very eyes, and ears—the most daring test of a phonograph or talking machine ever made. They saw a noted Edison artist stand beside

The NEW EDISON "The Phonograph with a Soul"

They heard the instrument sing in the artist's voice—in other words, re-creates her voice. Presently the artist herself began to sing note for note with the instrument. Musically trained ears strove in vain to distinguish the faintest shade of difference between the actual voice and the Re-Creation. Then, suddenly and without warning, the artist ceased singing, leaving the instrument to continue the air alone. Only by watching the artist's lips did the audience know that she had ceased singing and that they heard the instrument alone. This is the famous Edison "Tone Test."

Only Edison makes this test. Only Edison can make this test, because only the New Edison actually re-creates the human voice and the music of human-played instruments with every tone quality and every shade of expression. Ordinary phonographs, and talking machines, merely reproduce.

If you have not been fortunate enough, to witness an Edison Tone Test, you may at least hear Edison's wonderful new phonograph at our store. Make the time to suit your convenience.

PRINCE RUPERT MAN MAY GET VICTORIA CROSS FOR VALIANT WORK ON FIELD

SERGT.-MAJOR WOODS RECEIVES NOTIFICATION THAT HE HAS BEEN RECOMMENDED FOR HIGHEST OF ALL DECORATIONS IN GIFT OF THE KING

Word has been received by Sergt.-Major A. E. Wood who a few weeks ago went south from this city, to the effect that he has been recommended for the Victoria Cross. Naturally he is keen to know if this will be granted, as the Victoria Cross is the most coveted decoration a soldier can receive.

Sergt.-Major Wood as already explained in these columns, has already received nine medals. The Croix de Guerre, the highest award of the French Government, has been bestowed upon him. He has the Royal Humane Society Gold Medal, in addition to his army decorations, for saving life at sea, the King and Queen's South African medals with seven clasps, the Persian Gulf Medal with clasps, a long service medal for eighteen years' continuous service without a stain on his character, the Military Medal and Mons Star.

Only One Left. His personal record is one of the most amazing stories of the war, and that of his family one of the saddest. One of a family of ten brothers, he is the only one left and his mother and father too have died during the great struggle, his mother passing away while the body of her husband was in the house awaiting burial. Seven of his brothers have paid the supreme sacrifice on the fields of France and two laid down their lives in the South African campaign. The Sergt.-Major himself landed in France with the first draft of British soldiers who have since won undying fame and served continuously until February 4, 1918, when he was discharged as the result of four wounds and the effects of gas. In July, 1918, he returned to Canada but on September 17 he again offered his services and was accepted as a member of the Canadian Siberian Expeditionary Force. During the short time he was in civilian life on this side he was engaged in war work, cutting aeroplane spruce in the camps at Queen Charlotte Islands.

The valiant act which caused Sergt.-Major Wood to be recommended for the Victoria Cross took place at La Bassee while he was Sergt.-Major of C Company of the 2nd Battalion Lancashire Fusiliers on September 25, 1916, and with a full complement of officers, with the object of taking a line of trenches. With the forces against them completely overwhelming and their ranks thinned by heavy casualties, the little party were unable to retain their objectives, but every officer had been wounded or killed and only seventeen were left of the party when they arrived back to their own trench. Of the seventeen, some were wounded. Enemy machine gun fire was directed with deadly aim on the little band and the Sergt.-Major who had assumed command earlier in the action upon the officers becoming casualties, again braved the perils of No Man's Land and the German lines and, maddened by the destruction of his company, made a fierce attack on the machine gun positions. He put three guns out of action and brought back five prisoners, but not before he had two shrapnel wounds and a bayonet wound in the thigh.

Was Once Torpedoed. Returning home from the Dardanelles, suffering from the effects of gas and troubled with a previous wound which necessitated his leg being put in a splint, the Sergt.-Major was on a ship which was torpedoed. The ship sunk in seven minutes and many of those on board were unable to get to the boats. Sergeant-Major Wood, who was in one of the boats, saw two nurses and some wounded men in the water and tearing the splint from his leg leapt from the boat into the water and succeeded in rescuing the two nurses. It was for this act that he won the Royal Humane Society medal.

Brother Died in His Arms. The saddest experience of the many Sergeant-Major Wood experienced was at Plugsteert in the early days of the war. Of all the horrors of war Plugsteert is probably the most outstanding in the minds of the men who responded to the call in time to take part in the fighting in that section and the Sergeant-Major had an added experience to make the memory even sadder. He was helping in the recovering of the wounded from No Man's Land and had brought in two men. A third man whom he went to rescue proved to be his own and youngest brother, shot through the lungs and wounded in the head. So serious were the wounded man's injuries that he expired in his brother's arms, after he had been brought back to his own trench.

Sergeant-Major Wood had returned to Prince Rupert with the idea of getting again into civilian life when he heard the call for men for service in Siberia as brought by Corporal Nelson. He responded at once and is now at the Willows Camp, Victoria, where he is helping to lick into shape the men who are preparing for the Siberian campaign.
