How About Germany After the War?

What will happen in Germany when the war is over is one of the things that is being discussed a good deal just now. Will there be revolutions, riots, upheaval and crime, or will the people settle down to work after their mad revel of blood?

A good many people prophecy that there will be all sorts of trouble. They say that the military autocrats, the junkers and the men of wealth and position will all have to go and that the reign of democracy will be preceded by an upheaval that will make the French Revolution look as small in comparison as the Battle of Waterloo is compared with some of the battles in the present war.

If the Germans should take a notion to fight among themselves it will certainly be better than having them fight against our men.

Getting Settlers On the Land.

Thomas Jefferson once said: "Our people will remain virtuous so long as agriculture is our principal object. When we get piled on one another in large cities, as in Europe, we shall go to eating each other as they do there."

In Northern British Columbia an attempt is being made to interest people in agriculture, but so far it has not proved very satisfactory. Possibly it is too soon to anticipate what the Land Settlement Board is likely to do. They are not a colonization organization. They can draw up the plan and possibly advertise, but they can hardly have much compelling force in the way of bringing settlers in and getting them on the land. It is for the Board to provide the land and to look after the settler when he arrives.

There are colonization companies that have agencies throughout the United States and who are in a position to do more than the Government ever can do in the way of advertising the northern lands and inducing the right class of people to come. It is well worth considering whether it might not be well to place the colonization in their hands and pay by results. Advertising will have to be done, and even then there is doubt about getting results. If payment were made for results only to some organization willing to take it up the province would be the gainer.

In making this suggestion it must not be thought that we would place ourselves as a province in the hands of any private concern. It is simply this. We have the lands and we want those lands to be producing. In the ordinary course it will take generations to get the people on those lands. Why wait all that time if results can be obtained quicker?

Poverty an Offense To Poor and Rich.

George Bernard Shaw once wrote an article on poverty and in it he spoke of poverty being offensive to him. That is quite the right point of view to take. We read and talk too much about socialism. What we want to do first is to abolish poverty. There is no need for it. In a well governed country, or possibly it would be better to say in a properly self-governed country there should be none so rich as to be able to oppress and none so poor as to suffer by reason thereof.

Poverty cannot be got rid of by the giving of alms nor by the distribution of property. Charitable organizations have absolutely no place in a well administered country. The only value in charitable organizations is to provide a pleasant occupation for some old ladies and a few men and to give them an opportunity to patronize the poor. It is a form of gloating that is not pleasant for the person who happens to be the unhappy victim. In getting rid of poverty it is necessary to preserve the self-respect of all. Charity does not do that. It demeans and pauperizes.

The Provincial Government is attempting to regulate things to some extent by establishing a minimum wage for women. They are investigating conditions and they propose to see that no girl is asked to work for less money than will keep her decently. The idea is good and it will probably be a first step toward a better condition. The experiment will be watched with interest.

National Fish Day On Thursday Next.

Thursday next is Canada's national fish day. It is selected for the purpose of drawing special attention to the fish resources of the Dominion and also to induce people to use fish more regularly as an article of diet.

Fish is an excellent food. It is light and nourishing and should be eaten at least once a day. Many people use fish for lunch; others prefer it for breakfast, while not a few make it the main feature of the evening meal several times a week.

Every fish meal saves so much meat and is another bullet for the boys who are fighting the Huns. Just what Prince Rupert has done along this line it is almost impossible to estimate. She has saved enough beef to feed a battalion and done it continuously.

Prince Rupert people should observe fish day just as much as others. Sometimes on account of our nearness to the source of supply we are apt to overlook this valuable food. It is served in so many different ways and there are so many varieties that it is well to try them all in order to suit our individual tastes.
