The Reaction From the Strain of Warfare.

It seems rather a difficult matter to realize that now the fighting is past and done with, even for civilians here in Canada, who have never been within thousands of miles of the fighting front. And if the feeling of relief is so pronounced right here on the Pacific slope, it must be all the greater in those countries nearer the scenes of fighting, and within the radius of air raids. The fact of war, and all its terrible consequences has been brought home to the people of Great Britain with much greater force than to the people of Canada. This is partly because of their nearness to France. They also witnessed the lesser stream coming back, broken and wounded. Here we see an occasional wounded man, who has recovered. There they are so many that they can never be out of mind.

Never, either in Great Britain, was the horror of an air raid entirely away from the minds of the people, which the trans-Atlantic peoples were entirely free from. The feeling of relief, now that the tension is relaxed, must cause some reaction.

What Will They Do With Their Freedom?

The end of the war has caused a condition of affairs in Continental Europe which has been hoped and longed for for generations past. Within the past two years Russia has passed—is still passing—through the fires and ought to emerge purer and stronger. With the disruption of the Hohenzollern and Hapsburg Empires at once the cause of many futile rebellions is achieved. Poland, Ukraina, Bohemia, Hungary—the peoples of each of these countries have time and time again risen against their foreign oppressors, in vain endeavors to be allowed to conduct their own affairs according to their own ideas. Now they are in the fair way towards the achievement of their national ideals.

With the passing of the shadow of armed aggression which has hung like a pall over Europe particularly for the last hundred years or more, these peoples, intensely nationalistic as they are, now have the opportunity to work out their own destinies.

It is unlikely that they will be hampered with the fear of invasion of their territories by foreign armies as was Russia in her revolution. Without having need to guard against the enemy they will be the more able to set their house in order peacefully, if such be possible.

Canada's Role in The Post-War Period.

Our great Dominion of Canada, too, has a great deal to do during the period of the imminent time of the reconstruction of our boasted civilization. There is a whole lot of cleaning up and settling down to be done before the peoples of the world can enjoy peace once again. The most productive portions of Europe have been devastated. Large areas of her fruitful fields have remained untilled, with the result that famine threatens a large portion of her population. Until such time as the people there can enjoy the shade of their own vine and fig tree, Canada must help to supply their necessities.

Canada has still vast spaces to be brought under the plough and to be made to produce. "Production and still more production" must be Canada's watchword for years to come. Canada has the goods to produce, and the opportunity to dispose of them, both to her own advantage and to the advantage of the world generally. And Canada will rise to her opportunity.

What the Allies Will Do With the Kaiser.

The disposal of Wilhelm Hohenzollern is one of the matters which is causing considerable speculation at the present throughout all the Allied countries. The historic island of Elba in the Mediterranean Sea or the equally historic island of St. Helena in the southern Atlantic are being mentioned as possible places for his internment. Respect for the memory of the great soldier, however, precludes either of these places from consideration. Napoleon, although he was troubled with the "world power bug," was a soldier, with all a soldier's virtues, and that even his prison should be desecrated by the presence of Wilhelm would be too much of an insult to his memory.

Suggests Council Is Opposing Progress.

A caller at The News office yesterday suggested that if the city is determined to play the dog in the manger, neither allowing the Government to use the waterfront which can be traded for Cow Bay nor making any concrete proposal to use it themselves, it would be opportune for them to get an amendment to their charter which would allow them to go ahead with the municipal cold storage of which Mr. Montgomery speaks. He was of opinion that there was too much politics in the action of the council and but for that they would soon settle the matter.

While The News would not like to impute ulterior motives to anybody it is of opinion that something should be done. This standing pat against the interests of the community is hardly conducive to progress.

The same person who suggested that the council go ahead and do something, also remarked that since the beginning of time the various councils had never done anything to encourage the fishermen or the fishing interests and that if they really had the business at heart this was a good time to show it.

OUR soldiers must be fed; the people at home must be fed. And—in spite of Germany's murderous campaign to cut off the Allies' Food supply, by sinking every ship on the High Seas—an ample and unfailing flow of food to England and France must be maintained.

This is National Service—
Not to the Farmer only—
But to YOU—to everybody—
This appeal is directed

WE must unite as a Nation to SERVE—to SAVE and to PRODUCE. Men, women and children; the young, the middle aged and the old—all can help in the Nation's Army of Production.

WOMEN of towns can find no better or more important outlet for their energies than in cultivating a vegetable garden.

Be patriotic in act as well as in thought.

Use every means available—
Overlook nothing.
