Last Chance to Get Victory Bonds.

This is the last chance to buy the 1918 Victory Loan bonds. Tonight the sale closes and no offers will be received after that.

The record at the time of writing is one of which to be proud, but it will be better yet when the last sale is made tonight.

General Elections Coming In Great Britain Now.

Now that the actual strain of warfare is over, the people of Great Britain are going to indulge themselves in the joys of a general election—which they have denied themselves since the outbreak of the war.

The Union Government was for the specific purpose of uniting all factions in parliamentary circles to permit of joint and undivided effort for the winning of the war.

Now that the example is being set by the mother of parliaments, it may be expected to be followed the world over.

The various governments in the different countries during the next several years will have to have the confidence—the full confidence—of the electors if they are to accomplish anything worth while.

The Period of Re-Construction Looms Nigh.

The problems of the settling down of the soldiers and of the civilians too, after the work of war is no light task. It is one which will tax the capabilities of the leaders of the country.

The Passing Of the "Flu."

The glad news from the mayor that the schools are to reopen on Monday is significant of the great improvement in the public health which the last week has witnessed.

The epidemic appears to be definitely over, and should it break out again, the education the general public have received in hygiene during these last few strenuous weeks should assist materially in suppressing it promptly again.

Helpful Service Offered By Many Citizens.

During the first days of the epidemic, when many were fearful of the contagion, the noble and willing service freely offered by many of the citizens is worthy of the greatest commendation.
