2 YEARS AGO

a rash broke out on my hands and the doctor told me it was eczema." So writes Mrs. McDonald, of Oyster Ponds, N.S. She adds: "In spite of the doctor's treatment bad sores appeared, which gradually spread more and more. Finding that the doctor's treatment did me no good, I turned to various so-called remedies, but I met with no relief.

"Knowing how terribly serious eczema is and how it will sometimes defy all treatment for years, I became almost discouraged. This was my state when I read about Zam-Buk and decided to give it a trial. By the time I had used one box the eczema was not so bad. The inflammation and the irritation were subsiding. Naturally I persevered with Zam-Buk, and as I did so the disease was gradually overcome. Day by day the sores got less and less and, to my delight, the disease was finally driven out entirely. It seemed almost too good to be true and I feared the eczema might break out again, so I waited several months to make sure that I was permanently cured. I am; and Zam-Buk deserves all the praise."

INVESTIGATION INTO SOPHIA'S LOSS IS A DIFFICULT MATTER

It was not difficult for the Government to send Capt. J. D. Macpherson, Wreck Commissioner, a telegram recently ordering him to hold an investigation into the loss of the Princess Sophia in Lynn Canal, but the telegram did not state how it was to be done, and from all appearances it is going to be a difficult matter for such an inquiry to be held.

The inquiry cannot be held at Juneau, the nearest point to Vanderbilt Reef, as that is American territory. Furthermore, no American subjects can be subphoenaed, sa that those who stood by the wrecked vessel and could give necessary evidence can only be politely asked to attend the inquiry. If they consented they would have to come from Alaskan points.

There is also another difficulty, which is rather an extensive one. What is the court to investigate? The telegram says, "the loss of the steamer Sophia." The actual loss of the vessel was caused by running on the reef, but as all those who could give evidence regarding this are dead, the cause of the grounding will never be known, although it could be guessed at. From the time the boat went on the reef there was no way in which anything could have been done to save her, so that from that time nobody would be responsible for her sinking. As to the passengers, that does not enter into the inquiry in any way. Practically the only thing that could be done would be to compile facts, most of which are known.

Practically the only thing that can be done is to endeavor to place the blame for the loss of life and find out if there was any negligence displayed. This will be done when the damage claims come before the court. Then, again, there are the claims for services rendered by ships which aided in the search for bodies and stood by the Sophia.

Then We Meet Some Like This

A lady told one of our girls last week that she liked Pacific Milk well enough for cooking but that fresh milk is what she uses mostly.

"But," she added, "my husband insists I have it in the house for his coffee and porridge."

We find a great many homes like this. Some frankly admit they are prejudiced against tinned milk and do not use it.

Others, like this lady, get it because the family prefers it for coffee, etc.

But the bulk of our output is used for cooking—as we prove by house to house investigation.
