The Political Truce.

Although the Allies are still at war with the Central Powers, one of the noticeable things throughout the press of the Dominion is the fact that matters political are once more receiving greater attention. Practically since the last election there has been an unwritten truce to controversial matters in the world of politics, at least up to November 11, the date of the signing of the armistice. The armistice was the first forward and visible emblem of victory, and with the cessation of fighting the war was as good as won. With the winning of the war accomplished, to all intents, and no longer absorbing all the public interest, criticism of the present Government is becoming more pronounced, and in the Unionist newspapers, too.

Signs and Portents.

Several reputable citizens witnessed the resurrection of many house flies in their homes the day before Christmas. Another day, within the week, the dogs in the street were seen lolling on the sidewalks, with their tongues hanging out, and panting, as they do in midsummer. And yesterday a citizen of undoubted veracity saw a caterpillar, in all its glorious greenness, gobbling up the vegetation. And all the time seventy miles up river there is two feet of fresh snowfall. The mildness of the Prince Rupert weather around this Christmas is undoubtedly unusual at practically any other point in the same latitude. One plausible explanation is that the recent earthquakes felt in the province have released many calories of internal heat in the interior of the earth, permitting it to penetrate nearer the surface.

Real Enterprise.

Should this assumption prove to be a scientific fact then it may be presumed that the municipality will take immediate advantage of it, when proven. Instead of talking for the simple sake of talking, with the hopes of influencing the votes of the ignorant, about the establishment of the civic coal yard, when everyone knows that even if it did have a coal yard the city would have no power to operate it, the city Public Works Department might excavate down a little further through the earth's crust, nearer to this liberated heat. A small Vesuvius might be established on Mount Hays, and a hot water coil patent applied for, and of sufficient size, might supply heat to the whole city. This consummation would be of a triple advantage. It would first of all keep us warm; secondly, would economically abolish the Coal Barons, and thirdly and lastly, or at least let us hope so, would save us from a foolish and meaningless election parrot cry.

can be washed over and over again with Lux and still retain the delightful charm of freshness and newness. Very desirable, this, in war time! Lux is so gentle in its cleansing power that it cannot harm the most delicate fabric.

How to wash a silk garment

Use a tablespoonful of Lux to a gallon of water. Dissolve in boiling or very hot water and whisk into a thick, creamy lather. Add cold water until luke warm. Dip your garment through the Lux suds many times. Work it about, gently squeezing the suds through the soiled parts but do not rub! Rinse in three waters—clear and also luke warm. Press the water out—but do not wring. Dry in the shade and when nearly dry press on the wrong side with a warm iron—never a hot one. Press crepes from side to side and stretch a very little as you press. They will look just like new!
