

For Lingerie Hats

Take off the trimming when soiled and dip up and down in a bowl full of Lux suds—rich, copious, creamy. Never rub. Press out the water. Rinse carefully and stretch to dry. Your fabrics will be fresh, clean and sheer as when new.

The Lux way means economy in fine things—it washes them splendidly.

Building Materials of Prince Rupert

By William Bruce, F.E.A.S.A., Architect.

During the transitive period which we are passing through at the present time, when improved methods of construction and conservation are eagerly sought for the writer of this brief descriptive of the building materials obtainable in the city of Prince Rupert desires to place before the interested citizens the following facts that may be of some value in promoting the growth and development of the city.

The rock on which the city is built is thoroughly fireproof, being of a micaceous nature and at the same time capable of carrying heavy loads, when the pressure is applied on the natural bed of the stone.

It should not be assumed that every piece of stone in the district is of good quality, as we find good and bad material in all deposits of rock.

When using the fireproof stone of Prince Rupert, it should always be laid in its natural bed and masons skilled in dressing and building this kind of stone can prepare it to make a high class of walling suitable for street fronts and any other kind of building, in course or square dressed rubble. The natural bed of the stone is very suitable for the building of rain and damp proof walls and the top bed of every stone can be laid with a slight tilt outwards and thoroughly prevent the rain from entering the walls.

The crushed stone when mixed with good Portland cement make a valuable fireproof concrete. The fireproof stone is not very hard and durable for road and street making, but it is suitable for the construction of fireproof building when mixed with good Portland cement and it has been proved by thorough testing that fire and water will not destroy it.

One of Prince Rupert's most esteemed and professional citizens granted permission to the writer to prepare and test a number of samples of concrete composed of crushed rock mixed with Portland cement and the reliable testing appliances has proved that a mixture of local crushed rock and Portland cement makes a high class fireproof concrete, suitable for the best class of buildings.

Another important point is that owing to the nature of the stone, it can be crushed or ground very fine, and colored light or dark red with oxide of iron finished with a marble surface or cast in moulds to obtain an ornamental surface to take the place of expensive cut stone work, both pleasing and effective in color.

If concrete ship building is once begun at Prince Rupert, the local stone will be very valuable for such work as the concrete will resist severe strains up to and over 30,000 lbs. per square ft. and it can be made thoroughly waterproof in addition to its fireproof qualities.
