The Rod and Gun Club is planning to have a fish fry at Mile 21 or some other suitable point not too far away on May 24 next. One place suggested for it was on Muddy Creek, up the Ecstall river where the fishing is very good.

CLIMBED A TREE TO PULL DOWN PANTHER

Climbing a tree after dark to pull down a panther sixty feet up that might have been dead or alive, with only a little electric torch to guide, and a man and a little dog, at the tree foot to pick up the pieces in case the brute is not dead enough to be a pacifist—it reads like fiery fiction, but it isn't. It is an Otter Point episode.

Harry Vogel, well-known owner and operator of a logging camp at Otter Point, was in a motor car with H. A. Burke, of Vancouver, at dusk a few nights ago when a man told them he had seen blood stains on the roadway about a mile and a half back. He had followed the stains and had found the body of a sheep. His thirst for investigation faded when he saw the way the dead animal had been handled.

Found the Ewe.

Mr. Vogel is a sheepowner and he knew the signs—panther. In the car and with a small dog he and Mr. Burke drove to the spot where stains lay on the road. Following the trail of wool up the bank the men found the carcass of a big ewe, one of Mr. Vogel's. It had been dragged several hundred feet and up a steep bank.

With the dog leading, the adventurers went into the woods and Mr. Vogel shortly announced that the dog had the panther treed. The brute was about forty feet up, and in the darkness just the savage outlines could be seen with the green eyes glowing.

Got a Gun.

Mr. Vogel went away and got his gun while the dog and Mr. Burke stood guard. In the meantime the panther went up another fifteen feet. It was now quite dark in the woods, and as Mr. Burke happened to have an electric torch with him he directed the rays of this on the panther. Guided by the green eyes, Mr. Vogel fired several times, the animal never making a sound. The hunters then decided the panther was dead but he was lying on two branches. So Mr. Vogel announced that he was going up to get his victim. He climbed by the rays of the torch. The panther did not notice him. His interest lay afar in another world. He happened to be dead.

The panther is now at Mr. Vogel's house. It had killed three of his sheep. The big brute was a female and was about to have young. It was a lucky thing for the farmers of Otter Point that the two men killed the beast when they did.

NEW OFFICES FOR AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL SOCIETY

Four More Committees Arranged For an Active Work to be Commenced at Once.

The Agricultural Society has taken new offices just below the C. P. R. offices on Fourth Street, adjoining the Rocher de Boule. These are brighter and better offices than the former ones and it is thought will add to the prestige of the Society.

Four new committees have been added to those already arranged for, and the names of the committee men will be submitted to the meeting of the directors tomorrow night. The new committees are Mining, Fishing, Decorations and Indian, the last mentioned to deal with the question of housing as well as bands and exhibits.

President Perry has been busy organizing the work and will be ready to make a number of reports to the directors tomorrow. Included in the reports will be copies of circular letters which it is proposed to send to the secretaries of farmers' institutes and to mining and fishing interests.

Owing to the late start it is not expected that the best results can be obtained in the way of Indian exhibits but an effort will be made at once to get the natives interested and doubtless a creditable display will be secured. At any rate it should be far ahead of last year.
