Easter Sermonette For the Unfaithful.

Easter is the most joyous season of the whole year. Named after the goddess of spring it was originally a heathen festival, but was adopted by the Christian Church as the festival of the Resurrection.

As a heathen festival it celebrates the resurrection of all nature after its winter sleep. It speaks of the bursting forth of the plants and flowers, of the joyous love season of the birds when they fill the air with their songs of gladness, of the time when the bees come forth from their communal home and work together for the common good, gathering honey and pollen for themselves and their young. All nature is alive.

The Christian festival speaks of the resurrection of the body from the grave; of the resurrection of the soul from all sordid things to a season of inspiration and joy; of the resurrection of the race from a system of grinding competition to a period of co-operation and mutual helpfulness, when poverty will be no more but all will have enough and to spare.

Easter has a message to everyone. It calls to the man who is down to rise above his sordid surroundings and come once more into the sunlight of purity and beauty. It brings a message of hope to everyone. It beckons to the weary and depressed, to take heart once more for the life of the soul is everlasting. The call to man is reinforced by all nature around him and of which he is a part.

France's Demands Are Perfectly Just.

France is demanding payment for all damages, and her demand is a just one. A country that is invaded and desecrated as was that country, deserves everything she asks. The armies of the world should help enforce her demands to the last letter, whether the Germans are governed by a soviet or a monarch.

The lives of the young Frenchmen and the purity of the young French girls can never be returned, but the barbarians should have to pay for the damage they did.

While France and Belgium were suffering, the Germans' homes were violated because Germany had prepared for such a step and because her methods were ruthless. She has been driven out and has had to sue for peace, but a measure of justice must be meted out to her. To make her pay for the damage is the only method of bringing it home to her and to others who would follow in her footsteps that such things will not be tolerated. If the German people were now to go free without having to replace the ruined homes and the desolation which they have caused, there would be nothing to deter them or some other country trying a similar move at some other time.

Lloyd George is Still the Big Man.

In spite of what some small people may say to the contrary, Lloyd George is still the big man of the Empire, probably the greatest man in the world today. When he spoke in the British Parliament this week, princes and ambassadors gathered to listen to his words. He is still able to carry the people with him through the marvellous power of his eloquence. The little Welshman is the king of the British Isles.

In discussing the British leaders in a group of young Canadians, one of them said: "When I sing 'God Save the King' at the conclusion of any public function I always think of David Lloyd George, for he is the real king or greatest man or king of the Empire just now. He stands head and shoulders above all others in wisdom and power and to him I always take off my hat and raise my voice."

Writers of Letters Must Sign Names.

A letter has been received from "Another Roughneck," but it is not signed, and for that reason cannot be published unless the writer sends in his name and address. It is a rule of the paper that all letters to the editor must be signed. The name of the writer need not be published but as a guarantee of good faith the signature must be attached or the card of the writer enclosed. If the writer of this letter will give the required information the letter will be published.
