Another Concern With Faith in This Port.

The Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Co. has faith in this port. They must have or they would not go to the expense of increasing the capacity of their already large plant at Seal Cove. They intend to spend a lot of money and naturally they expect to get it back.

The news of the addition to the cold storage plant follows the announcement yesterday that another fish buying firm was to open up here. All this means increased business. It is an addition to the development of the shipbuilding yards which it is confidently expected will secure other contracts in addition to those already let.

The application of William Bruce for permission to purchase lands from the city for a terrace of houses is another step along the road which leads to prosperity. It means permanent development and that is what is needed here.

Stewart Development Likely to be Rapid.

The movement toward Stewart is already apparent and is likely to increase rapidly. On another page is an announcement that D. B. Morkill, the civil and mining engineer, is to open an office there, and he will be only one of many who are expecting to go into the district to practice their profession or to engage in business.

Stewart is on the boundary line between Canada and Alaska and the Americans are an enterprising people. Unless we set out determinedly to capture the trade of this district we shall find much of it going to other communities. The businessmen here are alive to the situation but they must work without ceasing to bring the business here if they are to have a full measure of success.

Why Pension One And Not the Other?

Certain sections of the people are constantly asking for pensions. They want to retire from work at a certain age and yet to receive their pay. With the idea of pensions we are in complete sympathy, but why it should be given to a civil servant and not to any other person who works in the service of his country is more than most thinking people can understand.

The man who blasts out rock at the shipyards, who digs the sewers or who goes fishing is just as much entitled to a pension as the man who sits in an office and makes up the accounts in a government office. Both are serving the community equally well and should be recognized accordingly. If the Government takes over the railways there will soon be another set of civil servants who will be asking for pensions. To be sure they should get them, but what about the other people who do not get pensions? Their turn will have to come eventually. Because a person works for a Government or for a corporation is no reason why they should have pensions and others who work for smaller capitalists be neglected.

Sir Thomas White Is Playing Politics.

Sir Thomas White is undoubtedly playing the politician in that he is encouraging the idea that he favors lower tariffs. He intimates through his publicity channels that if only there were no war debt to pay he would come out strong on a reduction. As the war debt has to be paid, however, he cannot do that. In this way he gets the credit for being a tariff reformer and yet he stands pat, and stands in with the manufacturers.

Sir Thomas seems to be making a bid for popularity. He knows that the Unionist Government cannot stand together on an old Tory platform as so many of the members are Liberal Unionists. It is doubtful even if Sir Robert Borden can hold them together very long. With a shuffling of the leadership, however, no one can say what may happen. Sir Thomas was once a member of the Liberal party. While his sympathies and his allegiance are Tory, and were to a large extent even before he changed his colors he is looked on by some people as a possible leader.
